RAF Bombers Hurl Blazing Destruction On Vital Axis Cities From Berlin to Italy

Throngs Watch Battles Rage Along Coast

Rail Yards in German Capital Left in Mass of Flames.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Nov. 24.—In one of the mightiest attacks yet in its ever-broadening offensive, the RAF drove home slashing overnight blows at both ends of the Rome-Berlin axis from Turin, Italy, to the Nazi-held continental coast by way of Berlin, the air ministry announced today.

Another heavy attack opened on the coast tonight in the Boulogne area. As the attack spread, the coastline was lighted up for miles by anti-aircraft fire and by flares dropped by the RAF as they searched out their targets.

An hour after the raids started the fighting was still going on and England's shores were lined with men and women watching the distant battle of planes and anti-aircraft guns.

Vital Objectives Bombed.
From yesterday's dusk to today's dawn British bombers kept at it and returned home with accounts of blazing destruction left in such vital objectives as Berlin's Pulitzstrasse and Lehrter freight yards, Essen's sprawling Krupp works and the Royal Italian arsenal and the Fiat works at Turin.

Other targets included Leipzig and Duisburg-Ruhrort in Germany; and Boulogne, Brest and Lorient in German-occupied France.

Describing the Berlin raid, the air ministry news service said the attacking planes reached the German capital before 8 o'clock last night and started at least 10 big fires in the Pulitzstrasse and the Lehrter freight yards.

Rail Yards Pounded.
Another formation bombed the rail yards between Berlin's Potsdamer and Anhalter stations with 1,000 incendiaries and numerous explosives, it related.

"The interior of my bomber was lit up as though we had an electric torch," said one pilot. "We could see Unter den Linden and the Tiergarten easily."

"There was an uncanny silence when we came over Berlin. Then their ack ack (anti-aircraft) began firing."

"While one of our bombers was held in the searchlights two Messerschmitts attacked. The pilot turned his machine toward them to avoid their fire and the fighters broke away."

NAZI BOMB THAT DIDN'T KILL—Salvage workers remove aerial bomb which British sources say was found in shattered rack of German bomber that crashed at Bromely, Kent, demolishing two houses. Bombs in rack did not explode and were removed from wreckage along with body of one German airman.

British Troops Regain Continental Foothold

Troops on Greek Mainland; Italians Still in Flight on Albanian Front.

ATHENS, Nov. 24.—(P)—British soldiers, forced from Europe last summer on the fall of France, have regained a continental foothold on the Greek mainland, it was disclosed tonight as Greek troops pushed on into Albania.

British warships transported an undisclosed number of soldiers across the Mediterranean without interference from Italian planes or warships, it was reported, and landed them at Greek ports some time ago. They were welcomed enthusiastically by the populace and since have been aiding the Royal Air Force in its battle against the Italians.

In the Greek-Italian fighting, a Greek spokesman said, advance units of the Greek army have reached Pogradetz, about 25 miles north of Koriza, the base which was captured last week from the Italians.

He also confirmed reports that the Greeks have occupied Maschopolis, about 11 miles northwest of Koriza.

Other reports said the Greeks have occupied the rocky heights above Argirocastro, main Italian base in Southern Albania, in the general drive, which has carried some units 19 miles forward.

A Reuters, British news agency, dispatch from Belgrade, Yugoslavia, said reports reaching that capital declared Greek advance forces had entered the outskirts of Argirocastro.

Royal Air Force headquarters disclosed that Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Longmore, commander of all British air forces in the Mediterranean, made a quick visit to Greece and inspected RAF squadrons.

The RAF said he expressed satisfaction at the speed and efficiency with which the units went into action and with their successes.

Berlin Warns Greece As Slovakia Joins Axis

Nazis Call Metaxas 'Tool of British'; Tiny Nation To Let German Troops Pass.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—(P)—The first chilly warning to Greece from Germany came tonight in a statement by the semi-official Deutsche Diplomatische-Politische Korrespondenz asserting that Premier General John Metaxas, of Greece, has "made himself openly a tool of the British policy of spreading war."

The statement came shortly after Slovakia, tiny nation made up of the remnant of Czechoslovakia, had signed the Axis military and economic pact and promised to rush to the aid of Germany, Italy and Japan in the event they are attacked by some outside power not already at war.

The semi-official publication declared that General Metaxas' statement that he was fighting for all the Balkans, was "extraordinarily risky and dangerous."

Bela Tuka, 60-year-old premier of the 20-months-old republic, pledged the "blood of Slovakia's sons" to uphold the Axis pact. His country thus became the sixth nation to join the Axis lineup. Bulgaria is expected to make a similar commitment, possibly tomorrow.

The pact was signed in the Reich's chancellery amidst the usual ceremonies. It was identical with previous documents except for substitution of the name "Slovakia."

More important than the mere signatures of Hungary, Rumania and Slovakia, however, is the generally-accepted belief that the signatory Balkan powers recognize the possibility of the war spreading farther into the eastern Mediterranean under conditions necessitating the movement of troops across their territory.

Thus piece by piece Germany apparently is clearing the way for what militarily seems most likely—the bulging of war in a new sphere.

Former Official Arrested Under India Defense Act

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(P)—A Reuters' British News Agency dispatch tonight from Lucknow said that Pandit G. B. Pant, former congress (Nationalist party) premier of the United Provinces, had been arrested under the defense of India act.

24 Pastorates Are Changed in Atlanta Section

Area Is Divided Into East and West Dis- tricts.

By DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.
Twenty-four changes in pastoral assignments in the Atlanta section marked announcement of assignments yesterday by Bishop Arthur J. Moore, president of the North Georgia Methodist conference. The Atlanta district was divided into an East Atlanta district, with 34 charges, and a West Atlanta district, with 39 charges.

Dr. E. G. Mackay, pastor of the Atlanta First Church for the past six years, was appointed superintendent of the East district, while Dr. Wallace Rogers, who has been pastor of the Griffin First church, was assigned to the West district. There was a total of 134 changes in pastoral assignments made in the North Georgia conference, the largest number being made in the Atlanta section. The Griffin and LaGrange districts had the fewest changes, 10 each.

The Rev. J. C. Adams, of the Franklin circuit, is returned to that charge for his 11th year, making him one of the longest-termed pastors in the entire Methodist denomination.

Atlanta Changes.
Among the better known Atlanta churches in which changes were announced are: Capitol View, College Park, Epworth, Grant Park, Hapeville, St. Paul, Calvary, First church, Payne Memorial and Wesley Memorial.

Pastors at Druid Hills, Glenn Memorial, Grace, Haygood Memorial, Inman Park, Kirkwood, St. John and Trinity are to remain as they are.

The East Atlanta district extends from Fairburn to Norcross and Alpharetta. The West Atlanta district extends to Acworth and the Woodstock, including the city of Marietta.

Among the larger churches in Atlanta placed in the East section are Druid Hills, Glenn Memorial, Grace, Haygood Memorial, St. Paul, Trinity. In the West district churches better known are First church, Park Street, Peachtree Road, St. Mark, Stewart Avenue and Marietta First.

Changes in the East district of widespread interest bring the Rev. H. C. Stratton to Capitol View, Norcross, and the Rev. John T. Toole to College Park from Barnesville, to succeed the Rev. W. S. Robison, who goes to Washington. The Rev. L. B. Jones leaves Grant Park church to go to Hapeville, to succeed the Rev. E. C. Wilson, who goes to Epworth, succeeding to Calvary, succeeding the Rev. Walt Holcombe, who goes to Wesley Memorial, succeeding the Rev. W. H. Boring, who moves to Bremen.

Auditorium Packed.
Wesley auditorium yesterday was packed to capacity to hear Bishop Moore's sermon at 11 o'clock. He spoke on "Have We a Message for These Times?" The bishop spoke of St. Paul's declaration, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ," and pointed out the contributions of the gospel toward human uplift during the centuries, and how all other efforts had failed. The bishop said the Christian gospel is the world's only hope.

At the afternoon session Dr. Roy L. Smith, of Chicago, preached. Bishop Moore then ordained as deacons the following: The Reverends P. M. Minter, E. F. Martin, C. T. Gray, C. R. Williams, R. E. Elliott, J. F. Thompson, E. C. Pressley, H. G. O'Bryen, J. R. Phillips, W. E. Strickland, and C. J. Daddis. Young ordained elders were as follows: The Reverends Dow Kirkpatrick, L. W. McArthur, M. S. Robertson, E. P. Kendall, J. E. Crawley, J. H. Gibson, W. G. Henry Jr., C. B. Jones, H. L. Mitcham, T. H. Wheelis, and Roy Allen Neal.

U.S. Launches Probe Of Food Price-Fixing

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—A nation-wide investigation designed to reduce the cost of food on the table and to increase the income of farmers who produce it was announced today by the Justice Department.

Following up a similar inquiry into the cost of home-building begun some months ago, the department said particular attention would be directed to the prices of bread, milk, meat, fish, cheese and fruits and vegetables, both canned and fresh.

In both investigations the announced purpose of the department is to eliminate any illegal monopolistic practices which might tend to control prices to consumers.

There was evidence, the department continued, that "the food industries function badly for both consumers and farmers."

"At one end . . . lies wholesale malnutrition among consumers due to their inability to afford an adequate diet. At the other end lies a population of producing farmers who must sell an abundance of food at distress prices so low as to threaten them with bankruptcy. Between are industrial groups, many of which are so close knit and powerful that they have made satisfactory profits throughout the depression."

Processors and distributors, the department went on, now receive about 50 or 60 cents of the average dollar spent by consumers for food, compared with 40 to 48 cents between 1913 and 1920.

(Several situations in food industry already being investigated. Story on Page 3.)

U. S. 'Freezing' Five-Inch Coat Of Belligerents Funds Studied

Action May Be Taken 'Out of Fairness' to All.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(UP)—The United States is considering the possibility of "freezing" not only German and Italian credits in this country, but British funds as well "out of fairness to everybody concerned," the United Press learned tonight on reliable authority.

The treasury has discussed the matter with other government agencies. It was emphasized that it still is in the discussion stage, but one official observed that "we will have to come to it very soon out of fairness to everybody concerned."

First Time.
Should the action be taken, it would mark the first time that United States funds of major belligerents have been immobilized. Thus far, the "freezing" has been applied only to nations occupied by Soviet Russia and the Axis armies.

United States credits of the three major belligerents are estimated to be in excess of $3,500,000,000, with the British having by far the greatest share.

Strict Supervision.
Freezing of such funds would have the effect of placing them under strict supervision of the United States treasury, which would control their movement through a licensing system. By executive order, the treasury would be empowered to deny or grant a license for release of any designated amount.

Such a system is not calculated to impede British armaments purchases in the United States since treasury licensing machinery is so geared that British request could be cleared almost immediately.

By imposing the freezing restrictions on Britain as well as Germany and Italy, the United States technically would be clear of any charges of discriminations that might lead to diplomatic breaks.

LUBBOCK, Tex., Nov. 24.—(AP)—The police radio station here reported tonight that fires, started by broken power lines, were burning in several parts of Amarillo.

The city water ceased pumping at 6 a. m. today and storage above ground was exhausted at 4:30 p. m. Lights were out except in a small section of the business district.

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 24.—(P)
A five-inch coat of ice was thickening on communications lines in the isolated Texas panhandle tonight, while in central east Texas vast lakes formed on thousands of acres of fertile farm lands and torrential rains continued to fall.

British Suggest U. S. Trade War Supplies for West Indies

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(UP)—Britain exchange her holdings in the West Indies for American armaments and supplies.

He said Lord Lothian had drawn timely attention to the problem of how to pay for war material when Britain's dollar resources are exhausted. After referring to the possibility of repeal of the Johnson act prohibiting United States loans to defaulters of World War debts, he said:

"There are other possible solutions. Some ingenious minds have suggested that British islands in the Caribbean seas might provide one."

"These form natural defensive bulwarks for America and some feel that a deal whereby they be made available to America in exchange for war supplies being made available here is a possibility of the future."

The Press Association's parliamentary correspondent said the suggestion had been made in "cer-

RIDING THE CIRCUIT AT THE METHODIST CONFERENCE

BY THOS. M. ELLIOTT

Several "new-baby" stories are being told among the preachers in conference circles and hearty laughs are indulged in at the expense of anxious daddies.

It is told of one prominent preacher that, on Sunday morning after a bouncing baby boy arrived at his house the night before he took for his text the next morning this verse: "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?"

Another preacher who was engaged in a revival meeting had his night's rest disturbed by a stork visit, bringing him a grandson. The next night, when the meeting was to have its final service the weary grandpa thought he would rest 30 minutes before going to the church. When he awoke from the little snooze, he found he had overslept himself more than two hours, and the meeting was over.

A preacher himself tells it that 10 brand-new babies were this year born into families of his board of stewards.

Emory University Hospital.

Emory University hospital, with its 161 nurses, has this year had an average of 180 patients daily, with a total number of patients for the year of 7,163. In 1937 the year's total was 5,388. The sum of $448,875 has been expended by the hospital this year.

Golden Cross gifts are used at the hospital for charity cases, of which there have been 231 this year, showing an increase of 22 above 1937.

Of the 7,163 cases treated this year 1,572 had no church connection, while there were 2,203 Methodists, 1,732 Baptists, 671 Presbyterians and 375 Episcopalians received treatment. Six thousand, eight hundred and fifty-nine of the patients were Georgians, but others came from states as far west as Texas, as far north as New Hampshire and Minnesota and as far south as Cuba.

SECRETARY—The Rev. George W. Barrett, secretary for 17 years, who returns to Underwood Memorial church as pastor.

Although the hospital was completely done over a year ago, there is urgent need for more room, that treatment may be given those now unable to be received. Consideration has been given recently to the erection of another building for this purpose. Enough new equipment is regularly installed to keep the hospital in possession of the very latest diagnostic treatment mechanisms.

The hospital has a property value of $1,750,000 with an endowment of $60,000, and no indebtedness.

Bishop Moore in Georgia. Georgia people who know what they are talking about are highly pleased that Bishop Arthur J. Moore is president of the two Georgia Methodist conferences.

Bishop Moore says he comes to the Georgia conferences as a servant, and as a co-operative worker in seeking to promote the religion of Jesus Christ. His one great desire and ambition is to do just that.

Bishop's RIB Act. Bishop Arthur Moore says he wants 500 Georgia Methodist churches to adopt his RIB act—repair, identify, beautify. He believes the adoption of this act by 500 Georgia Methodist churches will go a long way in helping the kingdom.

He laments the run-down, mortgage-foreclosure appearance of so many rural and small town churches. He urges Methodists to lead in a RIB campaign—repaid the property, identify it with signs, and beautify it with shrubbery, flowers, and other attractions. Women and men at conference say the bishop is right, and they propose to do something about it, and brighten the corner, as well as let the blessed sunshine in.

Lifetime Secretary. The Rev. George W. Barrett for 17 consecutive years has been elected secretary of the conference and editor of the minutes. He has been a conference member 41 years. He is a product of Hall county and Young Harris College. In college he struggled to get his degree, and in conference he has proven to be one of the most faithful laborers in Georgia Methodist history. He has a peculiar fondness for details, and the work he is doing so acceptably is exactly to his liking.

The work as secretary-editor is a very trying labor, and frequently a thankless one. It is doubtful if ever the conference had a secretary who so thoroughly comprehends his task, and gave himself to it more faithfully. In conference annuals only one man has ever been secretary for a longer period. Dr. J. W. Heidt was secretary for one term of 15 years, and for another of 18 years.

There is talk of making an exception in Mr. Barrett's case, and extending the 72-year age limit, so that he can remain secretary as long as he lives.

Most Conversions.

The Rev. Robert L. Armor, of East Point, has been a member of this conference since 1933, but in that time he has been able to make a place for himself in the conference, as one who gets things done.

This year Mr. Armor has had two achievements of note, either of which is sufficient to win commendation for him. He has to his credit the largest number of conversions this year of any pastor in the conference. He reports 68 added to his church on profession of faith. That is one distinction to his credit.

Another achievement is the erection of a modern religious education and recreation building by his church at East Point. The building is a model of modern facilities for that kind of church work, and is now complete and ready to start the new year's program of progress and constructive work.

HEADS EXCHANGE CLUB.

CEDARTOWN, Ga., Nov. 24.—Clyde Pittman was elected president of the Exchange Club for the year 1941 at a recent meeting. Other officers elected are: Albert Moore, first vice president; L. H. Gray, second vice president; Thomas Thompson, secretary; John M. Northcutt, treasurer.

Walter-Logan Action Will Be Decided Today

Anti-Lynching Amend- ment Seen If Senate Votes Favorably.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP) Senate opponents of the Walter-Logan bill, it was reported today, may offer anti-lynching legislation as an amendment—a step regarded as certain to provoke a filibuster by southern members and assure the eventual death of the measure.

The senate is to vote tomorrow on whether to take up the bill which would prescribe uniform procedure for quasi-judicial government agencies and would expedite appeals to the courts from their decisions. The house passed the measure last June over administration opposition.

If tomorrow's vote is favorable, some senators said, an anti-lynching amendment is expected to follow.

The house twice has approved bills to make lynching a federal crime, but each time southern senators have prevented action in the senate by carrying on what they called "prolonged debate" and what proponents of the legislation called a "filibuster."

Proponents of the bill assert it provides sorely needed reforms for semi-judicial agencies, bureaus and departments.

Opponents, including Majority Leader Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, contend the measure would hamper and restrict the work of the labor board, securities commission, social security board and other new deal agencies.

Before deciding whether to take up the bill, the senate is expected to give approval to elevation of Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, to the chairmanship of the foreign relations committee, succeeding the late Senator Pittman, Democrat, Nevada. This action was voted Saturday by the senate Democratic steering committee.

PLAYERS ELECT OFFICERS.

THOMASTON, Ga., Nov. 24.—Mariella Stephens has been elected president of the Mask and Wig Club. Myrta Chatfield was elected vice president and Barbara Davis, secretary. Mrs. R. B. Maxwell was elected treasurer. The club is planning to present its first play soon after Christmas.

Many Phases Of Food Sales Being Probed

Department of Justice Seeks To Lower Cost to Consumer.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP)—The Department of Justice today announced an investigation into the food industry in an attempt to reduce the cost to the consumer and to increase income of farmers. The following situations in the food industry were said to be already under investigation:

Bread—Complaints that two associations of bakers have fixed prices and attempted to destroy independent competitors.

Meat—Complaints that in an unnamed city slaughtering concerns have increased prices five cents a pound by limiting and allocating the amount of slaughtering and preventing importation of meat slaughtered elsewhere.

"Fictitious Auctions."

Poultry—Two charges that in metropolitan markets the price of poultry is fixed by "fictitious auctions."

Fish—Two complaints that associations of fishing boat owners and fish cannery make annual agreements to fix prices, and a charge that the price of one variety of fish is fixed by "collusive action of a few brokers."

Milk—A complaint that dairy companies and distributors have agreed to maintain prices and handicap sales. Another complaint that under "pretext of administering a state milk control law" a control board has boosted prices of milk moving into the state without materially increasing returns to farmers.

Canners Charged. Fruits and Vegetables—Charge that canners' associations have agreed to fix and manipulate prices.

Cheese—A charge that in sales of natural cheese "a few transactions in a fictitious cheese auction are used by the principal cheese producers to fix the price," and another complaint that an attempt is being made to create a monopoly in the sale of processed cheese.

Retail Grocers—"In one case it is alleged that an association of retail grocers, under the cloak of state laws against sales below cost, has prepared fictitious estimates of costs and has raised and fixed sales prices without regard to cost."

ATLANTA, GA., NOVEMBER 25, 1940.

Servants To Humanity

This week Atlanta will do honor to an organization, and to one of its greatest leaders, which recognizes, as does Atlanta, the inviolable manner which no has ever approached.

General Evangeline Booth, recently retired International leader of the Salvation Army, will be here for the fiftieth anniversary of the first establishment of the Army work in Atlanta. She will be honored by the leaders of the city and will speak at a great mass meeting on Sunday afternoon next.

In honoring the Salvation Army and its leaders, Atlanta honors herself. For a city which recognizes as does Atlanta, the invaluable good done by the Army, thereby proves it is a city blessed with understanding of the spiritual, as well as the material, values of life and that it realizes the greatest builders of the community are those which build the character and good citizenship of its people.

The Salvation Army in its early days was not as well known as it is today. Many factors in the communities where it sought to bring its message of hope and of faith, opposed it. Even in Atlanta there was some opposition and permits for street services or parades were sometimes difficult to obtain. In some Georgia cities there were disgraceful mob scenes as the unthinking people attempted physical assault upon the little groups of Salvationists.

But the vision of old General William Booth, founder of the Army, persisted in the hearts of his followers and was strong enough to prevail.

Today the Salvation Army is known and blessed all over the earth. But nowhere has it been a more powerful influence for good than in Atlanta and the southeast.

This city is now Salvation Army headquarters for the southeast. The Army conducts many important activities here, including a training college for cadets, hostels for men and for women, administrative and executive offices, etc.

Atlanta this week extends a heartfelt welcome to Miss Evangeline Booth and seeks to tell the Army she so recently led some part of the gratitude the city feels for its ministrations and some part of the hope that will continue to enlarge its spheres of influence in this territory for many half centuries to come.

Argentine Realism

Argentina outwardly is acting much like a capricious woman toward a hemisphere which has been seeking a joint defense against aggression. While a mission from that country is in Washington arranging details of economic help to be given Argentina, officials in Buenos Aires strongly oppose American encouragement of Uruguayan and Paraguayan naval bases.

Yet there is no capriciousness on the part of Argentina. The opposition is hard-headed reality, a fear that when this world war is over the neighbor nations might be tempted to use these facilities against the government in Buenos Aires, which under the status of present bases and armaments is the more or less benevolent strong man of the south Atlantic.

Now it is probable the United States first approached Argentina with the suggestion that that country build the naval bases needed in that part of South America to effectively guard or patrol its waters. But Argentina has a strong sense of independence, particularly in its relations with the United States. So the chances are the suggestion was turned down. This country then naturally turned to Uruguay for the naval base and to both Uruguay and Paraguay to suggest air bases which all American countries might use in the event of an emergency.

To reverse the situation, let us suppose the United States Army and Navy remained at its pre-war strength, that Argentina had an army and navy slightly larger and that she was re-arming at a tremendous rate. Then, as a gesture of hemisphere defense, she suggested to Cuba—athwart a vital communication line—that Cuba build, with Argentine financing, a naval base for the joint use of all other countries. Under those circumstances we in this country would feel that a national interest was endangered because Cuba under other circumstances might use that naval base against the United States. There is the crux of the Argentine position. She still fears the "Colossus of the North," and was sharply reminded during the last campaign in a needless and heedless Willie speech that Roosevelt is not king and that the "good neighbor" policy under a Republican President might melt as do the snows of the Andes.

That Argentina seeks, at the same time, a loan from this country is not strange when it is considered the loan is merely one facet of a trilateral arrangement. Argentina wants to sell Great Britain meat and other foodstuffs valued at $160,000,000, and to do it must have a loan from the United States. The United States government thinks the loan a good thing, since it will help an ally. Actually this country is helping preserve Britain's markets in the free world as well as aid her in the conflict overseas. The loan to Argentina is one way this can be done. The money wouldn't be much good, anyway, if Hitler wins, which he won't.

"It would cost 12 cents per annum for washing the hands of each school child in New York." And at the end of the year, what have you got?

Where Are the Spitfires?

What has become of Britain's fighter planes? Of the Spitfires and Hurricanes and Defiants that, a month or two ago, were performing so effectively in breaking Nazi air formations and sending Nazi planes crashing to earth in destruction?

The bombing of Coventry, Birmingham and other industrial cities of England seems to have been done by waves of Nazi bombers in hundreds and there is no mention in news dispatches of any defensive action other than that of the anti-aircraft guns.

Surmise hints that the Nazis are using some new method of attack which has effectively foiled the British fighters of the air. Or, that Britain's defensive fighter forces have been so depleted they are no longer able to meet the invading air fleets with any effectiveness.

British bombers are, it is true, wreaking havoc for their own part on the industrial centers of Germany. Hamburg, Bremen, Essen, Berlin and other German cities have undoubtedly suffered fearful damage.

But it is the fighter planes that now seem to be missing. Or, at least, to have lost their effectiveness.

Those of us who pray nightly for the cause of Britain would feel far better, today, if the Hurricanes and Spitfires were still diving into the swarms of Nazi bombers and bringing down their score or two or more a day.

Britain faces terrible days ahead if the bombers of Goering are to be permitted to attack any chosen target in force, with practical immunity from fighter counter attack in the air.

Editorial Symposium

STRIKES IN DEFENSE INDUSTRIES.

The question of just what attitude the United States government should take toward strikes involving defense production looms large in the nation's newspapers as 3,700 workers of Vultee Aircraft Company's plant at Downey, Cal., walk out, and tie up production of some $60,000,000 worth of planes for this country and Britain. "An outbreak of defense-industry strikes now would be intolerable," declares the OMAHA WORLD-HERALD. "It would prove that Hitler was right when he said democracy is decadent."

"The public, without whose support no strike was ever won, should bear in mind" that this strike was called "over the objections of the defense commission and that the labor member of the commission considers it unjustified," says the LOS ANGELES TIMES. And the PROVIDENCE JOURNAL believes "The union officials owe the American people a straightforward explanation of their act."

"If the threat to defense production through strikes becomes serious, it may be necessary to pass legislation to apply to the defense industries something of the same sort of machinery that is provided for in the railway labor disputes act, under which strikes on railroads must at least be delayed until boards of adjustment and mediation have had an opportunity" to investigate the questions at issue, suggests the NEW YORK TIMES. Meanwhile, the DENVER POST declares, "Industrial strife should not be allowed to hamstring the defense program." The federal government "has plenty of power" to force adjustment.

"Some labor leaders appear to have forgotten that this nation has recognized existence of a dire emergency . . . and that the defense industries are being geared to meet that threat," warns the MEMPHIS COMMERCIAL APPEAL, which adds the thought: "The national defense happens to come before the opinions, actions and ambitions of a few paid labor leaders." At the same time, the KNICKERBOCKER NEWS, of Albany, states: "It is indeed a travesty on the right to strike when 17 airplanes are taken through the picket lines . . . for delivery to the government, while the work on $80,000,000 worth of planes is stopped."

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

BUREAUCRATS ARE POUTING WASHINGTON, Nov. 24. Informed persons have long suspected that German and Italian diplomatic and consular officials were abusing their privileges in this country. The Dies committee "white paper" has now concentrated public attention on the problem, without doing more than scratch the surface. Possibly this will force some one to straighten out the ridiculous bureaucratic tangle between the State and Justice Departments, which has thus far prevented the problem from being dealt with really effectively.

The tangle's history reads like a parable on the weaknesses of bureaucracy. The Justice Department first proposed to deal with the improper activities of the Axis diplomats as long ago as the middle of September. The State Department, where the matter was handled by Assistant Secretary Breckinridge Long, proved somewhat coy. A correspondence ensued, which has produced nothing to date but a fit of the pouts on both sides. But a time table of the transactions between the two departments will give a better notion of what has happened.

TIME TABLE OF DELAY On September 18, the Justice Department addressed an official letter to State Department expressing the liveliest concern over the doings of the Axis diplomats and consuls, suggesting that some action ought to be taken, and pointing out that the matter was clearly within the State Department's province. To this the State Department replied with a brief request to be notified when, and if, the Justice Department got ready to act.

Shortly thereafter Representative Martin Dies presented to Secretary of State Cordell Hull photostats of some of the material published in his committee's white paper, chiefly that concerning Manfred Zapp. These photostats were held in the State Department until October 14, after many of the facts in them had already been unofficially published, when they were referred to Justice. Although the Justice Department might have preferred to watch Zapp if there had been no publicity, grand jury proceedings were instituted.

With the Dies committee photostats, the State Department also sent Justice a letter, politely inquiring what ought to be done about Axis diplomatic and consular officials who were going beyond their "proper activities." As this was precisely what the Justice Department had asked the State Department in September, Justice was somewhat staggered.

But on October 18, Justice rallied. Another communication was addressed to the State Department, suggesting the State Department might define the term, "proper activities," and requesting a compilation of all the treaties, diplomatic usages, etc., governing the treatment of diplomats and consuls by the countries to which they are accredited. No answer was received, and there the correspondence ended. Even now nothing has been settled on either side, and no one is in a position to do anything about a problem which the Justice Department already described as gravely serious some two months ago.

MR. LONG'S KNACK There have been other episodes of a similar but minor nature. For example, during the late summer, the State Department transmitted to the Justice Department, in what seemed implied reproof, a letter from the German embassy protesting watching of German diplomats and consuls by FBI men. Then this fall, the State Department's visa division, which has been grimly withholding visas from numbers of anti-Fascist political refugees in Europe, suddenly decided to issue one to a German prisoner interned in Canada. This man's entry had been stopped at the border by the Justice Department's immigration agent.

Justice is now so aroused that a press release detailing the transactions between State and Justice would have been issued last week if Attorney General Robert H. Jackson had not suddenly changed his mind.

Since final decisions on international matters are clearly up to the State Department, Justice seems to have good ground for complaint. Nor is this surprising, since Assistant Secretary of State Long is the man directly involved. Those who worked for easier admission of the English children to this country saw him use every resource of his position to obstruct their effort, and know he would have succeeded if the President had not rapped him smartly over the official knuckles. Those who tried to help the European political refugees heard him argue visas could not be issued to these unfortunates except in the discretion of the "independent" consuls, despite several indications that the "independent" consuls had really been stopped at the border by the Justice Department's immigration agent.

But Long is a side issue. What is clearly required is a frank conference between Secretary Hull, Attorney General Jackson and Representative Dies, at which the entire question of counter-espionage will be put on a sound, workable and less haphazard basis.

Letter From

Harry Lauder.

How many of us remember Harry Lauder, the great Scotch comedian, who sang his songs in a way no one, since, has been able to approach, much less equal. I mean any singer of any songs of today. Not a one of them has the power, the ability to give perfect enjoyment to his listeners, that Lauder had.

Lauder must be old, by now. He lives in Scotland and his home is called "Lauder Ha." He was far from young during the first World War, in which his only son was killed.

I doubt if many of us here, who remember his visits to Atlanta, his performances at the Erlanger and the old Atlanta theater, would recognize him. Or, perhaps, we would. Because Lauder is almost unique.

I don't recall, exactly, the dates of his visits, but that first one, to the Atlanta theater, must have been before the first World War broke out. I know it was long after I married, because it seems to me it was one of the early attractions to which wife and I went together. And we were married in January of 1913.

These reminiscences of Lauder were aroused by sight of a letter, just received from him, by an Atlanta. I can't identify the recipient of the letter, by request, but he is a doctor, an old friend of Lauder and is today very interested in, and active in, the Atlanta branch of the British War Relief Society.

Here is Lauder's letter, to this Atlanta, dated August 19, 1940: "Thanks for your letter. Please don't worry. The Huns are just doing what they are told to do. It's a new religion they have put into Germany. They shall not prevail. We are striking them down in 50's and 100's, and I am thinking about the Covenanters, and believe me we are prepared to fight and fight until we win, win, win.

"We are not shakin' no quakin'. Tell America to help us in machines and we'll do the fighting, but it would be a terrible thing (if and when we win the war) and America shan't have a hand in it. But I feel confident if we fighting continues a little while into 1941—the U. S. will be wi us, with no stops between.

"What a glorious day here; man, ye widna think there were Huns in a' th' world. Write me soon.

"Our united love,
"HARRY LAUDER."
"GRETA & MOTHER."

Do You

Remember?

I can see Lauder now, strolling around the stage with one of those fantastic crooked walking sticks of his, singing,

Roamin' in the gloamin'
By the bonnie banks of Clyde,
Roamin' in the gloamin'
Wi' your lassie by your side;
When the sun has gone to rest
That's the time we love th' best Roamin' in the gloamin'.

Or have you ever heard one of his older tunes, that about the "saft boy" of the village?

I'm the saftest of the fam'ly,
I'm the perfect Johnny Ray,
For ev'rythin' me mither blames me,
An' me father puts it on to me an' a'.

You just can't believe, can you, that a country which gave to the world such brave spirits as Lauder, as well as Shakespeare and Chaucer, could be crushed into slavery?

In Earlier

Days.

I first saw and heard Lauder in the music halls of Liverpool. And at the Argyle theater, in Birkenhead. The Argyle was a little place, patronized by the dockhands and factory workers of the industrial city on the Mersey.

Even then such attractions as Lauder were beyond its range, for expense. Save for one thing. The proprietor of the Argyle had been good to Lauder when the to-be-famous Scotchman was having a hard time, at the beginning of his career. Had given him several engagements when they meant the difference between eating or starving. And Lauder never forgot. Throughout his career, regardless of how famous he became, of what huge weekly stipend he could command, he played a week at the Argyle each year for the same pound or two that seemed so big to him in the older days. And he gave the pound or two, and more, to charity. That's the kind of a fellow Harry Lauder was, and is.

Twenty-Five

Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Thursday, November 25, 1915: "New York, Nov. 24.—Twice again today the name of Captain K. Boy-Ed, German naval attaché, was brought into the testimony of witnesses at the trial of Karl Buehn, Adolph Hoehnmeister, Joseph Poppinghaus and George Kotter, accused of conspiracy to deceive and defraud the United States government by dispatching relief ships with supplies to German cruisers in the Atlantic and Pacific at the beginning of the war."

And Fifty

Years Ago.

From the news columns of Tuesday, November 25, 1890: "Strangers visiting Washington are now taken down into the treasury and shown the hole which was formerly occupied by the surplus."

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

(The views expressed here are Mr. Pegler's own.)

Thanks Due Fay

NEW YORK, Nov. 24. Rank and file members of the unions of the American Federation of Labor owe thanks to Mr. Joe Fay, the head man of the New Jersey mob of the AFL and a member also of Frank Hague's mob of the party of humanity, for taking pops at Mr. Dave Dubinsky, the president of the Garment Workers, during a social interlude in the national convention in New Orleans. By pasting his distinguished colleague in the leadership of the mob with a capital L, Mr. Fay suddenly gave emphasis to the demand for the elimination of racketeers, grafters, unionizing exploiters of the labor movement and plain journeymen criminals from positions of leadership.

It happens that the territory in which Mr. Fay operates is a particularly dirty jurisdiction, where union leadership is as crooked, brutal and stupid as the political leadership, and it is easy to understand why Mr. Fay regards as "clumsy" Mr. Dubinsky's resolution to ban racketeers.

The attack on Dubinsky, which developed into a three-round brawl, began, appropriately in the bar of the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans, a true spiritual home for individuals of the type whom Mr. Dubinsky's resolution would detach from their graft and powers. The Roosevelt, and particularly the bar, was the headquarters of Huey Long's gang of thugs and thieves in the day of the Kingfish's greatest power, and its traditions are synonymous with every gangster of the American Federation of Labor. Its manager was Mr. Seymour Weiss, the head thief and criminal genius of the Long mob, now under two federal prison sentences for operations having to do with the famous double-cross swindle against the people of Louisiana.

Feel at Home

The atmosphere of the hotel has long been one of conspiracy, thievery and thugery, and the American Federation of Labor, whose national convention is a veritable hoodlums' old home week, would be sure to feel at home amid the criminal reek that lingers from the days of the dictatorship.

It must be noted that but for the impulsive and characteristic conduct of Mr. Fay the Dubinsky resolution might have been shoved around and whittled away to a harmless and meaningless general repudiation of sin, with no practical or personal application to any individual hoodlum in the councils of the AFL. But now, whatever the fate of the resolution and regardless of the form in which it is finally adopted—if it is adopted at all—public opinion will realize that the situation has not been exaggerated in the press in the last year, incredible though the disclosures may have seemed.

It may be possible to persuade congress to appoint a special committee to examine evidence that the leadership of the A. F. of L. unions constitutes a very ambitious racketeering gallery and to develop before the country the fact that many unconvicted crooks in the union are crooks, nevertheless, who use their union offices to promote various rich rackets in private business and politics.

Produce

Evidence

As to Mr. Fay's insinuations that Mr. Dubinsky himself may have personal knowledge of racketeering in times past which does no credit to his present workers, it would seem to be up to Mr. Fay to present his evidence on behalf of the labor movement which he holds so dear and for such compelling reasons.

Even this much may be said of Mr. Dubinsky's conduct as bearing on the purity or impurity of his motives, which are open to suspicion of political opportunism: Mr. Dubinsky has been in the labor movement for many years, and the racketeering of which he is so abruptly and plausibly aware has been going on for many years, but he never became aroused until the situation had been widely, if not thoroughly, exposed in the press.

It may be observed also that neither John Lewis ever testified himself noticeably against criminals and other racketeers in the AFL when he was a strong influence in that organization, although just now he is full of scorn for William Green's group. This fact creates a suspicion that his exposure of the subject of criminal leadership are only political repartee.

I am glad Mr. Fay has drawn attention to the AFL leadership in New Jersey, for I have much data on crooks of various kinds in the union in a zone of influence. There are some charming goings-on in its territory who will not enjoy fame, and Mr. Fay has done an effective, if unintentional, job as advance agent for the public denunciation of a mob of racketeers as evil as the brook in Chicago, Cleveland or Brooklyn.

Resistance They Shall Meet, Though Death Be Their Lot.

Since when have threats deterred the soldier brave
Or even men behind the front line trench
Once sworn to rid the world of putrid slench
Within its nostrils? Or be slow to save
This England from departure to some grave
So far escaped. Each fire we will quench
Though it burn long and weary bring the wench
To older backs! We were not born of slave.

We were not born of slave and so we stand
All ready to resist this man who swore
To wipe from earth our little island grand
And to let end would visit our fair shore Resistance he shall meet, though death our
His machinations shall not be forgot.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL

ENGLAND'S FINANCIAL NEEDS In a column from Louisville last week it was reported here that newspapermen at the convention who were in close contact with English problems, said that British financial problems rapidly were becoming as desperate as the problem of the war.

Speaking in New York on Saturday, Lord Lothian, British ambassador to this country, confirmed what those newspapermen said, declaring, "Great Britain is beginning to come to the end of her financial resources."

That means us. The next move is up to us.

It means that the opening gun in the campaign to create enough public opinion (which may already exist) to repeal the Johnson act and revise the neutrality act, has been fired.

Work along that line has been going on for some time. England's position now is so critical, both financially and along the war fronts, that Lord Lothian was instructed to speak out.

The ambassador said that 1941 would be a difficult year; that England needed everything in the way of war supplies, munitions, planes and ships, and "perhaps finance."

This means that England has said, as frankly as she can, that she will be defeated by the end of 1941, or before, unless this country can give her more supplies, planes and ships—on credit.

This war is costing England more than $10,000,000 per day. England must pay not only the United States for what she gets; she also must pay her dominions for what she obtains from them. They exact cash just as does the United States.

PUBLIC OPINION There exists in this country a great and genuine sentiment to assist England. It is, to be frank, tinged with realism. No man believes that if this country were fighting a battle for its life against a strong nation at one of its borders that England would plunge into the war to assist us.

The war debts which England did not pay, no matter how much juggling of figures and how much sophistry is employed, also have helped create the isolationist sentiment in this country. The war debt chickens and the hostile English propaganda against this country in the years after the war, are chickens coming home to roost. It is not popular, perhaps, to mention these things but they are necessary if one is to think clearly. They are important only as they explain why we had so much isolationist feeling.

Despite this, most of those who were isolationists realize this one fact and an invariable fact—

We must assist England!

We must assist her because if England falls we will be left alone, our backs to the wall, with the whole world against us. All the might and resources of that world will be turned against us.

I do not think military attacks would begin within a year. But they would follow the usual pattern of pre-military plans which have been employed in Europe by the totalitarian governments.

England, defeated, would be a hostile government. It, of necessity, would follow the course of the Vichy government. We may save our own country from war if we get into it with aid to England—all sorts of aid.

That means we will see in congress, beginning this week, the first speeches for us and against revising the Johnson act, which act properly refused credits to nations which had defaulted in their debts. We also will see the first of the speeches concerning revision of the neutrality act to permit our ships to carry war materials in certain zones.

Those changes must be made. It no longer is possible to avoid doing them. If we can continue to get into the war only with aid to England, perhaps, we shall escape going to war with all we have.

If we can sell supplies, lease ships, sell planes and munitions on credit, and permit "volunteers" to enter the English air force, we may escape the war. And even if England again repudiates her debts, we still shall have saved the world from the worst of all, no matter how selfish it may sound, is what we want to escape.

THE POPE SPEAKS

Pope Pius XII spoke yesterday from Rome, praying for peace.

He is a great man and a great thinker. He said, in the course of his plea, the literal truth when he said the war grew out of a fight for raw materials and that the minerals and the oil beneath the earth disturbed man's aims and destroyed his peace.

England must pay her own dominions and the United States for everything she buys. She must use money or establish credits with money or sale of goods. She is not making many goods for sale. There are not enough ships to carry them.

Germany pays money for nothing. Perhaps now and then she spends some of her captured gold for Canada's nickel and some of our own raw materials which are "middle-manned" by some South American nation or by Russia.

But Germany has got control of all the raw materials and all the oil of Europe. She pays no one for it in cash. She pays no one at all except it be Russia. And that in goods.

Germany does not need money to fight this war.

England does.

We'll have to do the job as we did before. By doing it we may miss another "expeditionary" army.

The Mountain of Your Childhood Seems a Little Hill After You Grow Up

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

The new-born fawn, spotted and without a scent because so utterly without protection, is easily overwhelmed by many things that will not trouble the full-grown buck.

All things, as you know, are relative. Nothing is big or far or great except in relation to other things that are less.

We speak of the might of the German military machine, yet we know that its strength, however great, seemed doubly impressive because of the weakness of France.

When Dempsey and Tunney fought at Philadelphia, the astonished experts excused their false prophecies by saying: "He seemed a mere shell of the old Dempsey." He had seemed invincible when he fought lesser men; now he was a "mere shell"—not in absolute fact, but in comparison with the superior Tunney.

During the football season, each Saturday brings astonishing "upsets" as the best-advertised squads mysteriously change from strong to weak to strong. The change is more apparent than real, for each squad seems powerful as it runs over a weaker one, and strangely weak when it meets one that is bigger and better.

What is true of armies and athletes is likewise true of our personal burdens and troubles. They are great only in comparison with our ability to carry and overcome them. "A trouble is a ton or a trouble is an ounce"—not depending upon the way you take it, but depending upon your ability to take it.

And in this truth there is new hope for all who are troubled and heavy-laden, for one who cannot lessen his trouble can at least make it seem small by making himself bigger.

At the age of 12, my pet dislike was a kid named Ralph, whose father was a small-town general merchant. I envied him, for he was bigger than I, wore better clothes than mine, and had endless supplies of candy. Moreover, he talked tough and had me scared. But I outgrew him and surpassed him in school, and two years later my attitude had

Florida Gives Its Grid Team Fine Welcome

Gators Treated as Heroes; Team Looks to Auburn Game.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Nov. 24.—(P)—University of Florida football players received a heroes' welcome as they returned home today from Atlanta where they upset Georgia Tech, 16 to 7, Saturday.

More than a thousand students and townspeople lined West Main street on both sides of the railroad track to cheer the returning squad.

Coach Tom Lieb and End John Plombo, master mind and spark-plug, respectively, of the Atlanta performance, were paged by the gleeful students but had stopped off in Jacksonville.

The Gators emerged from the grueling battle with no injuries of any consequence. Bill Robinson, center, who has been bothered with a knee injury, aggravated the ailment after the game when he slipped and fell while entering a taxicab.

Lieb summoned the squad to meet early tomorrow afternoon for a scouting report on Auburn, the Gators' next opponent. However, players who participated in the Tech game will be given a day off from practice.

The team will have only three days to practice before departing for Columbus, Ga., where they meet Auburn Saturday.

Saturday's victory gave the Gators the first clean sweep over both Georgia and Georgia Tech in the university's football history. It brought the team's record to date up to four victories against three defeats, and drew praise from fans throughout the state who hailed the team as the best Gator outfit in a decade.

All-Americans

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Carter Barron was one of the Washington visitors leading the cheers as the Redskins arrived to play pro football with the New York Giants.

We did not want to make the mistake of thinking that Mr. Barron, formerly of Georgia Tech, had been swept along with the enthusiastic throng as he clambered down from another train, and so we put the question to him.

"What has pro football got that is making many an eastern college team cry uncle?"

Mr. Barron was not hesitant. He happens to be one of the better showmen in the theatrical business, and Carter Barron simply said—

"When you see the two best college teams in America playing, you might get a look at two or three possible All-Americans. In any pro game there are 22 All-Americans, and I might add that each substitute is an All-American, too."

"Pro football gives you the best possible football. Far be it from me to seem a derider of college ball because it so happens that the first score any Saturday of any interest to me is the score of the Georgia Tech team."

"But pro football has made great strides in the east. It also will, in my opinion, do well in the south when—ever an energetic operator takes charge," Carter Barron said.

It was, indeed, a surprising thing to see in cold, aloof Pennsylvania station, a shouting, happy crowd of pennant-waving folks whooping it up in the manner of Apaches on the war trail. Washington folks show more enthusiasm over the Redskins, really, than any college folks actually show over their alma mammy.

Grant To Go

It is a matter of much concern to those of us traveling with Auburn to hear reports that popular Porter Grant will soon be leaving Auburn to become a reserve officer in Uncle Sam's Army.

Grant, according to what we hear, will be asked to refrain from coaching and devote all his time to military service at Auburn.

There happens to be other bits of belated news on the trip. For instance, Auburn and Boston College entered into an agreement on keeping Lou Montgomery, colored ace of Boston College, out of the game.

Auburn agreed that if Montgomery did not play, that Captain Dick McGowan would be used for only half of the game. And that is how it was.

One of the odd stories coming up after the game has to do with an assistant manager of Coach Leahy's highly resourceful Eagles.

Believe it because it is true, an assistant manager got in for the final two minutes of the game. He slipped in under the cover of darkness, but it is perfectly all right because he was eligible. He is allowed to play about two minutes in any game that is comfortably won.

As we head back home we think of Appomattox and O'Rourke. One was tough for Lee and the other was awful to Auburn.

An Odd Year

It is an odd football year when the University of Florida finishes with victories over both Georgia and Tech. Of course, it may happen that this statement prompts a bit of letter writing from Florida alumni asking why it is so unusual. Prosperity changes things.

But it is still unusual, and the funny part about it all is that Coach Tom Lieb, having done more than any Florida coach in many years, now will be expected next year to win them all. Or at least he will be expected to win a good many.

Anything Coach Lieb may do hereafter, unless he puts Florida in some bowl, will be anti-climatic. On the other hand, for a guy taking charge of a football team in September, Tom Lieb is entitled to be acclaimed as the best coach of the year in the Southeastern Conference.

Opposing Stars

Auburn's football players, bouncing back from Saturday's struggle with Boston College, took time out today to select an All-Opponents' team.

Here is their selection: Left end, Elrod, Mississippi State; left tackle, Barnes, L. S. U.; left guard, Gore, L. S. U.; center, Gladchuk, Boston College; right guard, Adershold, Georgia Tech; right tackle, Hall, Clemson; right end, Skipworth, Georgia; halfbacks, Bird, L. S. U., and O'Rourke, Boston College, and fullback, Johnson, Southern Methodist.

The pick shows that Auburn respected Louisiana State players a little bit more than they did Boston College, since the vote was three for L. S. U. and two for Boston.

Auburn will be up and at the final opponents of the season. Ty Irby, who did not play at all against Boston, and Rufus Deal, out since the Tech game, will be ready for Florida at Columbus.

It would not be bad guessing to take Auburn in the last two games. They'll end the season against Villanova at Montgomery after meeting Florida at Columbus.

The boys from the Plains are going to be tough after that setback of Saturday in Fenway Field at Boston.

Time Out!

Giants Upset Redskins, 21-7, Before 46,439

New Yorkers Cash In on Breaks; Baugh Clicks on 106th Pass.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(P)—New York's wide-awake football Giants had an early date with Lady Luck today, cashed in on her favors for two quick first-period touchdowns and upset the Washington Redskins, 21 to 7, in a National Professional Football League game.

With the largest crowd of the local pro season, 46,439, huddling in showers and cold dampness at the Polo Grounds, the Giants took advantage of two first-quarter openings to put the game on ice and then sent their ace, Tuffy Leemans, on a 36-yard touchdown dash in the closing minutes to make the decision stick.

The Redskins, who not only didn't get the breaks, but hardly deserved them with the ineptness of their attack once they penetrated enemy territory, finally scored in the third quarter on a Sammy Baugh-to-Ed Justice pass after Justice had blocked a New York kick on the Giants' 10. This pass was Slingin' Sammy's 106th completion of the season, thereby deadlocking Parker Hall's league record for a year's campaign.

Ace Parker Stars As Dodgers Win.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(P)—The brilliant ace Parker celebrated his "day" at Ebbets Field by pitching and running the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 3-to-0 victory over the Chicago Cardinals today.

The win kept alive the Dodgers' slim hopes for an eventual tie with the Washington Redskins for the Eastern honors in the National Pro Football League.

Packers Roll Up Their Biggest Score.

DETROIT, Nov. 24.—(P)—The Green Bay Packers today rolled up their biggest score since entering the National Professional Football League in 1919 in swamping the Detroit Lions, 50 to 7. The triumph kept alive Green Bay's hopes of overtaking the Chicago Bears in the fight for the Western Division title, now held by the Packers.

It was the worst defeat in the history of the Detroit club.

Bears Crush Rams, 47 to 25.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—(P)—Rolling out their finest offense of the season, the Chicago Bears overwhelmed the Cleveland Rams today, 47 to 25, in a National Professional Football League game before 20,717 spectators.

Steelers, Eagle Game Postponed.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—(P)—A 24-hour rain that turned Shibe Park into a morass of mud caused postponement of today's National Professional Football League game between the Philadelphia Eagles and the Pittsburgh Steelers until Thursday, official Thanksgiving Day for Pennsylvania.

Don McNeill Wins Argentine Crown

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 24.—(P)—Donald McNeill, of Oklahoma City, United States national champion, added the Argentine title to his collection today by beating Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Ore.

The match went five sets before a decision was reached, 8-6, 4-6, 6-0, 6-3.

Visiting United States stars completed a clean sweep when Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Cal., and Cooke's bride, the former Sarah Palfrey, of Boston, captured the women's doubles crown 6-0, 6-3, from Jane Stanton, of Santa Monica, and Felisa Piedrola, of Argentina.

"98" FINALE—COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 24.—Tattered and torn, the "98" jersey worn by Tom Harmon in his three touchdowns splurge against Ohio State, was hung up for the last time Saturday night by the Michigan ace back. He made the number famous with a three-year scoring record that smashed the 15-year-old mark hung up by Harold "Red" Grange, of Illinois.

Gophers and Eagles Continue Unbeaten March as Cornell Bows

Decisive Tilts Still Remain On Schedule

Texas Aggies and Stanford Face Tough Foes This Weekend.

By BILL BONI.
NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(P)—Minnesota has completed its schedule without defeat or tie. Michigan's Tommy Harmon has played his last game for the Wolverines and set a new Western Conference scoring record. Harvard has scored record. Texas Aggies and Stanford face tough foes this weekend.

All are signs that the 1940 college football season is about ready for the historians and the second-guessers. But if few teams still are on the active list in this last big week of competition, the games they will play are nonetheless decisive.

Texas A. and M., Stanford, Tennessee and Boston College, all unbeaten and untied so far, must get by Texas, California, Vanderbilt and Holy Cross to finish what they want. Nebraska must beat Kansas State to insure outright possession of the Big Six title. Some 105,000 spectators still must fight their way into Philadelphia's municipal stadium to see Army play Navy.

FITTING FINISHES.
There could have been no more fitting finales to the season than those delivered yesterday by Harmon and Frank Reagan, of Penn. Michigan's wonder boy, climaxing a career in which he wiped out Red Grange's scoring record, ran for three touchdowns, passed for two more and booted four extra points as the Wolverines hung a horrible 40-0 shiner on Ohio State and finished right back of Minnesota in the Western Conference standings. The Gophers, No. 1 team in the country, finished their business in financial style by overcoming a 0-13 deficit to whip Wisconsin, 22-13.

Reagan, meanwhile, was carrying Penn almost single-handed to a 22-20 victory over Iowa, which saw the Red and Blue wipe out 13-0 and 20-16 Cornell leads. Cornell helped beat itself by trying two passes from its own end zone. But Reagan, with the able assistance of Center Ray Frick, scored three touchdowns and punted handsomely after noon, running the Cornell's ragged despite the very obvious fact that Penn had no passing attack and the Ithacans therefore could concentrate their defense on stopping the runners.

While Penn is Ivy League kingpin, first honors in the east must go to Boston College, which ran and passed its way past Auburn so smoothly and effectively that the hardy Plainsmen couldn't come close to a score until they were behind, 33-0, and then they saved themselves from a shutout only against the B. C. third and fourth strings.

In addition to Cornell, Penn State and Mississippi also are rudely handled. The Nittany Lions' reputedly stout defense fell apart as Pitt paraded to a 20-7 score, while Ole Miss, its Merle Hapes and its Junior Hovious bowed to one-sided, but undefeated Mississippi State, 19-0. Brilliant kick-off returns of 55 and 83 yards set up two State scores, while the Maroon line held Ole Miss outside the 40 until the last quarter.

To escape a Southeastern Conference tie with State, Tennessee must whip Vanderbilt. Off the impressive style in which the Vols beat Kentucky, 33-0, they'll be favored, but the task wasn't made to look any easier by Vandy's great stand against Alabama. The Commodores led until the last four minutes when Jimmy Nelson, who already had pitched two scoring passes and helped drive 70 yards for another tally, tossed one for 40 yards and the touchdown that won, 25-21.

One other major title was decided as Clemson came from behind with a 53-yard forward-latch

U. S. Royal Master Tires Are Sam Martlin's Big Hobby

Puts Your Car On 4 Resilient, Soft Cushions

U. S. Tire Supply House Also Has Stock of RCA Radios.

By PRESS HUDDLESTON.
Sam Martlin is an enthusiast when it comes to talking automobile tires.

Sam is the owner and manager of the United States Tire and Supply House at 603 West Peachtree street, corner North avenue. He thinks he knows tires—and he does—and he swears by (not at) U. S. Royal Master tires. "This tire," says Sam, "is more than a tire—it is a moving, working, safety device that gives each wheel of your motorcar, where you have it on, thousands of extra, sharp-biting edges to penetrate slippery film, grip the road and stop your car."

The best way to prove Martlin is right—and he is—is for you motorists to drop out to Sam's place and he will convince you, first verbally, and then when you put a U. S. Royal Master tire on your car—or a set of them—which would please you and Sam both better—you will say Martlin was exactly right.

Martlin's company has all sizes of U. S. Royal Masters, has them in black and white, and he can fit your passenger car out in a jiffy. Now, for trucks, the tire concern carries a big assortment of Ray-master tires, the same type of excellent tires for heavy duty.

There's another thing that will interest you at the U. S. Tire Supply House. Go out and look over their stock of RCA radios for the home. These are the standard, popular radios you will see in many homes. You can get them from this big tire house as low as $12—and one would make a fine and acceptable Christmas gift for those in your home or for some friend.

But let's get back to U. S. Royal Master tires, about which Martlin can never say too much. He declares:

"Motorists never know the true pleasure of driving until they ride on U. S. Royal Masters. They are designed and engineered in every respect to match the very latest developments of car performance. Royal Masters put your car on four resilient, rubber cushions, that roll smoothly along the highways at all speeds. They make driving easier by their fingertip steering, reduce nerve strain by their quiet flowing ride, their freedom from buzz and hum, and their unrivaled ability to absorb road inequalities. In fact, I have never known a tire like it. The scores that we have sold have made us many friends and customers. People actually come in just to tell how, in an emergency, their Royal Masters is an important contribution to modern motoring safety, and I have staked my local reputation on it."

As all motorists are interested in securing this unusually safe American tire, Mr. Martlin invites them to come into his plant on West Peachtree, at North avenue, and be presented with a Royal Master Safety Booklet, as long as they last, containing a digest of the traffic laws and scenic points of interest of every state; or better still, take a look at a moving picture of these tires in action.

WIPING CLOTHS—Above shows the busy force in the plant of Rothschild & Company, specialists in wiping cloths, at 444 Edgewood avenue, washing, cleaning and making sanitary the cloths shipped all over the U. S.

Rothschild Wiping Cloths Shipped All Over the U. S.

Keeping 24 employees busy in his wiping cloths plant and shipping his products to business concerns, factories and mills from Texas to the New England states, is just now the record of Emil Rothschild, owner of Rothschild & Company, Incorporated, specialists in wiping cloths at 444 Edgewood avenue.

The large force of employees are busy day and night washing, sterilizing and packing clean and useful cloths for the numerous purposes for which they are prepared.

Recently Mr. Rothschild has added new equipment in his laundry, new dryers and washers, and with a plant modernized and able to meet the demand for his wiping cloths—a demand that has grown fast and dependable by reason of the type of cloths he ships to his patrons.

"Complete sterilization of new and reclaimed materials is the outstanding feature of the service our company is offering, for we are specialists in wiping cloths, washed and sterilized in our own modernized and enlarged laundry," said Mr. Rothschild.

"It is our policy to satisfy the trade with worthwhile merchandise and prompt and courteous service," he said. "Our merchandise is put up in convenient cartons and bales. All merchandise is guaranteed and we maintain a prompt delivery service."

"The Rothschild Company superior quality wiping cloths are not only clean, but they are sanitary and lintless as well. In preparation," Mr. Rothschild continued, "they go through the following treatment: Washed in chemicals, boiled in live steam, baked at more than 200 degrees for 30 minutes. When finished they are as sterile as hospital gauze."

Sanitary wipers mean health insurance for your employees. They eliminate infections that set in from minor cuts. They keep cutting oil from becoming contaminated. They are one of the surest means of keeping your working forces intact."

During the more than 20 years in business Rothschild & Company has made a special study of the needs of the consuming trade, commercial and industrial; and it carries in stock wiping cloths suitable for every purpose.

The new plant at 444 Edgewood, which, by the way, they would be very glad to show you if you will come around, is not a junk shop, but kept spotlessly clean. All rags are laundered, and thoroughly sterilized and there is no danger from infection from cloths that come from this firm. Experts cut these rags the proper size for use and assort them correctly. You may not know, but there are from 30 to 50 different grades of wiping cloths.

Figures Show Fuel Savings Exaggerated

Manager Chamberlin Metal Weather Strip Co. Explains Why.

In these efficient times many home-owners are confused by the apparently conflicting claims of products designed to save money on the fuel bill. Each of them can prove substantial savings—but the "total" of the combined possible savings seems, at first glance, to be greatly exaggerated.

For example, typical savings reported by individual manufacturers are:

Weather strips at windows and doors, 25 per cent.
Insulation in attic, floor and walls, 25 per cent.

Storm sash on windows and doors, 15 per cent.

Automatic stoker heating, 25 per cent.

Winter humidity control, 71-2 per cent.

Thermostatic furnace regulation, 71-2 per cent.

But if all these are valid—there is 25 per cent. more. But this stoker saving is 25 per cent. of $100 to heat, before applying any of the products mentioned. Then weather strips are applied with a saving of 25 per cent, leaving a fuel cost of $75. Next year a stoker is installed with a possible saving of 25 per cent. more. But this stoker saving is 25 per cent. of $100. The fuel saving percentage of each additional product, as given, therefore applies only on the actual net fuel cost—not on the original fuel bill of $100.

The next question that comes up is "Which of these investments represents the largest return in respect to its cost?"

Independent surveys, technical studies, home-owners' testimony, all verify the fact that weather-stripping, expertly installed, realizes greater fuel saving per dollar of cost than any other possible home improvement, according to B. R. Hendrick, Dixie district manager of the Chamberlin Metal

Weather Strip Company, of Atlanta.

"For year-round ease in window operation, freedom from drafts and soot, Chamberlin weather strips have been unexcelled for 47 years," Mr. Hendrick says. "Our factory-trained mechanics are schooled in the highest standards of workmanship, and our representatives are glad to explain, without charge, what Chamberlin can do to lower fuel costs, increase home comfort."

OUT O' THE WAY, TREES!—Showing the fine road-building work being done by "Caterpillar" Diesel on federal job near Savannah. Machine, sold originally seven years ago to Clayton county by Yancey Bros., was traded in, overhauled and is now back on big job, as good as ever.

'Caterpillar' Diesel Good After 7 Years

Sold Originally by Yancey Bros., Then Overhauled, Now in Service.

After doing service for seven consecutive years pulling scrapers and graders over the roads of Clayton county, the county commissioners of Clayton have somewhat reluctantly parted with the first "Caterpillar" Diesel 75 tractor ever sold in Georgia by Yancey Bros., and have traded it in with the road equipment supply house for a new model "Caterpillar" Diesel D-7 tractor.

However, the old "Caterpillar" Diesel was not to be cast aside like an old shoe. There was plenty of life and work still left in the old machine. It was completely overhauled and put into fine workable condition at the Yancey plant on Whitehall street. It soon was transplanted to a big job the federal government is doing in building a big anti-aircraft firing center near Savannah. The contract there for construction, for road-building and for clearing off a large tract of land in the federal preparedness program, is under an Atlanta concern, and this company has found the reconstructed "Caterpillar," traded back to Yancey from Clayton county, as one of its useful road-building pieces of machinery now on the work at this federal project.

In a letter to Goodloe Yancey, president of Yancey Brothers, the Clayton county commissioners tell of the wonderful service rendered by the "Caterpillar" bought from his company seven years ago. Mr. Yancey is quite proud of the letter, and is equally as proud of the fine service his road-building machinery is rendering to the counties of this state.

The letter to Mr. Yancey says: "The first 'Caterpillar' Diesel 75 tractor sold by your company in the state of Georgia some seven years ago was to Clayton county, Jonesboro, Ga. This was tractor No. 2E264, and was built by the Caterpillar Tractor Company, Peoria, Ill. This tractor has been in continuous service since it was delivered to Clayton county, doing road work, pulling scrapers and graders."

"Clayton county is modernizing its road-building equipment, and we have just recently purchased two 'Caterpillar' No. 12 Diesel motor graders, a new model 'Caterpillar' Diesel D-7 and a LeTourneau Carry-All scraper."

"We traded in this old 'Caterpillar' Diesel 75 tractor on one of the new model 'Caterpillar' Diesel D-7 tractors, which has all the latest improvements the Caterpillar Tractor Company has developed over a long period of years."

"We feel very attached to this old 'Caterpillar' Diesel 75 tractor, and really hated to trade it in, as it still has lots of good service in it. However, after looking at the new model 'Caterpillar' Diesel D-7 tractor, we decided that it would be best for the county to make this trade, as the new 'Caterpillar' Diesel D-7 tractor has more power, speed and flexibility than the old model."

"We are very much tickled with our new 'Caterpillar' Diesel D-7 tractor, and hope that we will get as good service from it as we did from our first 'Caterpillar' Diesel 75 tractor No. 2E264."

The commissioners of Clayton county are H. L. Turner, Riverdale, chairman; Jim Mundy, Jonesboro, vice chairman; Miss A. L. Rutherford, Jonesboro, clerk; L. A. Evans, Hampton, and J. D. McElroy, College Park.

CHECK TO POLICYHOLDER—Showing O. L. DeLozier, of Atlanta, state manager Inter-Ocean Casualty Co., of Cincinnati, delivering sixty-third monthly claim check to a policyholder in Macon, disabled more than five years.

'Lenient' Sentence Urged by Objectors

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP) More "lenient" punishment than the year and a day sentences recently imposed upon eight divinity students in New York for failure to register for the draft was urged today by the National Committee on Conscientious Objectors.

The committee, an affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union, termed the sentences "extremely severe" in that they deprived the students of their citizenship.

"These men did not seek to evade the draft," the committee's chairman, Ernest Angell, wrote Attorney General Jackson, "but presented themselves to their draft boards and then on the grounds of conscientious opposition to conscription, declined to fill out the prescribed forms. Even in the World War the maximum sentence for a similar offense was a year—making it a misdemeanor, not a felony."

Claim Checks Promptly Paid By De Lozier

State Manager Inter-Ocean Company Has Fine Record.

"An Action Picture of Health and Accident Insurance" might be the caption of the picture herewith, which shows O. L. DeLozier, 1725 Rhodes-Haverty building, Atlanta, delivering the 63d monthly claim check to a policyholder in Macon, who has been disabled for more than five years.

Mr. DeLozier, who is state manager for the Inter-Ocean Casualty Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, insured this Macon business woman in 1930 under one of his company's standard contracts, providing monthly benefits for either accident or sickness for the full period of disability.

He points out that this case and many others which are in his files is the best argument known for the existence of his business. When the policyholder becomes disabled, he dies an "economic" death, which is sometimes as bad as a physical death, according to Mr. DeLozier, who handles all of his claims from his Atlanta office and has had occasion to come to the aid of many people in the time of real economic stress.

He says that the nation's annual bill for sickness and accident reaches a staggering figure because doctors' fees, medications, etc., must be added to the salaries and wages lost. It has been estimated that about one in eight persons suffers some kind of disabling and costly sickness or accident each year. The only known device that gives satisfactory protection against financial loss when disability strikes is a good income protection policy.

Mr. DeLozier also says he would be glad to receive inquiries from persons interested in becoming agents for the Inter-Ocean Casualty Company in Atlanta and throughout Georgia, either on a full-time or brokerage basis.

BEHIND THESE GATES LIES FAME—These are the hardest gates in the world to crash. Behind them lie the vast studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The eastern camera crew of this company has been sent to Atlanta to make screen tests of all girls between 17 and 27 in this territory who have movie possibilities. They will begin auditions at 2 o'clock Tuesday in the ballroom of the Georgian Terrace hotel, where cameras will be set up.

Movie Scouts Search Here Set Tomorrow

Atlanta Girls Keep Telephones Busy Seeking Appointments.

BY LEE ROGERS.

There is nothing slow about these Atlanta girls except their drawl.

Announcement was made yesterday that a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer talent-searching crew would begin tomorrow afternoon interviewing all girls in this section between the ages of 17 and 27 who think they have what it takes to get in the movies.

From early morning the telephone at the Georgian Terrace yesterday was kept busy by girls seeking to get a jump on their sisters by making an appointment ahead of time. They lost no time in beginning their campaigns.

Even some of the handsome menfolk sent their photographs to the talent scouts, though it specifically was announced only girls would be considered on this trip.

But no interviews will be granted or appointments made before 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon under present plans.

This eastern test crew is in Atlanta looking for girls with an authentic southern accent. It seems this picture called "Gone With the Wind" started a cycle of southern motion pictures, and caused many of those which are not about the south to be rewritten to include a southern girl as a character.

To find photogenic southern belles who have a hankering to get before a camera and emote, M. G. M. has sent a complete movie test crew to Atlanta to grant auditions to all girls between 17 and 27 years of age—who desire them—and to make full-length screen tests of all those they think have possibilities.

The camera crew is under the direction of Edward Carrier, test director, who will interview 228 girls desirous of movie careers. They will continue these auditions each day through Sunday midnight. The hours are 2 until 4 o'clock each afternoon and from 7 to 9 o'clock each night.

They only promise to make screen tests of the best possibilities among the applicants. They promise no careers, no contract. But Margaret Sullivan and Robert Taylor got their start with just such an opportunity. Look where they are today.

War Aftermath Dismal Picture, Scientist Says

Famine, Disease, Death Said To Be Overrunning Europe.

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH.
Associated Press Science Writer.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The three horsemen of the Apocalypse who ride behind war—famine, disease and death—were said today to be already overrunning Europe.

In a report to Scientific Monthly, official magazine of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor, of Stanford University, said that the aftermath of the European war may be worse than the war itself.

Throughout Europe and particularly in the countries conquered by Germany the problem of food is already becoming acute, he declared, and shortages are necessitating strict rationing of available supplies.

In Norway, Denmark, Holland,
Belgium and France, he said, there will be inadequate supplies of wheat, meat, fats and oils because those available supplies have either been commandeered or used up by the armies, and farmers have not been able to work their lands.

In addition, Dr. Taylor added,
"in most countries a special problem is the feeding of refugees."
On the heels of famine are bound to come thousands of cases of disease due to lack of food, clothing, poor housing, insufficient hygiene and lack of fuel. Public health and other medical authorities paint a dismal picture of the coming winter for millions of Europeans of all nationalities.

Thousands of children, they say, will be born dead, thousands of mothers will die for lack of medical attention, diphtheria and pneumonia will kill other thousands, and if epidemics of influenza, typhus, typhoid fever, measles and plague break out—which medical men fully expect—the toll of death and suffering will be much greater than that of the war itself.

eign press.

GREEKS CHASE ITALIANS—The Greek army followed hard on Il Duce's retreating troops in Albania last night, the Greek command said. On the northern front
(1) late dispatches said the Greeks took the town of Maschopolis, 11 miles northwest of Koritza, and that Italians were retreating from Pogradet northward. In center (2) Greek troops reached Frasher. On the coastal front (3) Greek advance forces entered the main Italian base of Argirocastro, Belgrade dispatches said, while other Greek forces drove down the road to Porto Edda.
Britain reported RAF bombers raided Elbasini, another Italian base. (Story on Page 1.)

Martial Law Is Purely Defensive Measure, Press Declares.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Nov. 24.—
(P)—The military attaché of the German embassy left for Berlin by plane today, unofficially reported to be carrying confidential memoranda on the results of a conference which Ambassador Franz von Papen had with the Turkish foreign minister yesterday.

The Turkish press meanwhile laid considerable stress on its statements that the recent invocation of martial law in vital parts of Turkey was a purely defensive measure against any possible surprise attack.

The official government newspaper Ulus said the extraordinary defense regulations were ordered enforced "after Italian attacks on Greece in our zone of security."
"Except for this they have no further meaning," the paper continued. "We shall never permit material or moral weakness to pave the way for a surprise attack against us."
Yeni Sabah said Germany was trying to conceal the increasing importance of United States aid to Britain by drafting recruits for the Axis. But this, it added, was "like trying to cover the noise of bombs with firecrackers."

Germans Make Futile Lunges Above London

Two Bombers, Fighter
Bagged in Day of Spasmodic Clashes.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(P)—The Germans lunged unsuccessfully at London today and peppered the Kent coast "Hell's Corner" with air bombs and shells from long-range guns across the channel, then with the setting sun launched their nightly assault on the capital.

All in all, it was a quiet day and Nazi formations attempting to stab through London's defenses were "promptly met and dispersed by our fighters," the air ministry announced.

The day's subdued activity followed a night of heavy attacks lasting several hours on a town in southern England where the government announced a number of people were killed and considerable damage done.

The Germans reported their planes last night dropped 600,000 pounds of high explosives and 12,000 incendiaries on Southampton, one of the two main ports used in peacetime by transatlantic liners, and 660,000 pounds of assorted bombs on Birmingham, Britain's greatest industrial city, which underwent two heavy raids last week.
The air ministry announced two bombers and a Messerschmitt fighter were downed in the day's spasmodic air fighting. One bomber was bagged over the channel, the other over Cheltenham and the fighter off the southeast coast.

Flying Tackle Brings Suspect to Earth, Cell

A flying tackle early last night brought to earth and to a city jail cell a 27-year-old white youth accused of snatching the pocketbook of Miss Evelyn Cunard, of 820
Piedmont avenue.

The tackle, Ralph Turner, of 785 Piedmont, heard Miss Cunard shout and captured the thief after a chase of nearly a block. The prisoner was listed at city jail as John T. Osteen, 27, of a Grant street address.

Devices Sought For Combating Night Raiders

Great Britain and U. S.
Work on Secret Weapons.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(P)—
Secret devices to combat deadly night bombing raids are being developed both in this country and Britain, authorities said today.

Lord Lothian, British ambassador just back from England, said his country's technical experts were hard at work on a number of "hush hush" devices for the destruction of nocturnal bombers.
He added cryptically that the problem would not be solved in the next two months.

The ambassador's mention of a specific time limit was interpreted in some quarters as indicating that the question had become one of production rather than a search for the new weapon.

The army is keeping a tight-lipped silence regarding its devices for night bombing defense, but a high officer assured newsmen "we are not asleep." General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, disclosed last week that the army has observers with the Royal Air Force and it was officially explained that they have had unusual opportunities to learn what the British are doing.

Prince Saionji, High Japanese Statesman, Dies

Was Twice Premier. Advised on Choice of 20 Others.

OKITSU, Japan, Nov. 24.—(P)—
The last of Japan's genro, or elder statesmen, Prince Kimmochi Sai-onji, whose 91 years of life spanned the whole period of Japan's emergence from medieval insularity to rank among the great economic and military states of the modern world, died today.

He had been ill at his home, a few hours' train-journey from Tokyo, since November 13.

A child barely beyond the toddler age when Commodore Perry made his historic visit to Japan in 1853, a young man when feudalism was abolished in Japan, Saionji's career, embracing military and diplomatic service, was inextricably woven into Japanese history.

The Tokyo newspaper Asahi said Saionji would be given the posthumous rating of court official, first junior grade, the highest rank ever conferred on any imperial subject.

He was twice premier himself and had advised the emperor in the appointment of at least a score of other premiers from 1916 on, when as a marquis he became a sort of junior member of the genro in selecting Field Marshal Count Saigō Terauchi for the high post.

He headed the Japanese delegation to the Paris conference after the World War and sat with Wilson, Clemenceau, Lloyd George and Orlando when the Versailles treaty was drawn. In 1919 he was invested with the Grand Order of Merit, and in 1920 he was made a prince.

He adhered to tradition in one regard. Men of the Saionji family did not marry because of the legendary jealousy of a phantom serpent woman. The line instead was maintained by adoption.
Saionji was thirty-third in that line. For the thirty-fourth he adopted a son of Prince Mori, head of the Chosu clan.

Military Plane Output Speedup Sought in U. S.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(P)—
The War Department has asked the Priorities Board of the Defense Commission to make a study of commercial airplane production in this country with a view to some curtailment, officials disclosed today.

The department seeks a curtailment of production of planes for airlines and private pilots to speed the output of military planes. Officials said, however, that they did not advocate a complete stoppage of non-military production.

The Priorities Board has not replied to the request so far.

Famed British Hussars Rout 50-Tank Italian Unit in Desert

By EDWARD KENNEDY.
WITH THE BRITISH DESERT
FORCES IN EGYPT, Nov. 24.—(P)—
Out of the silent desert, case-hardened officers of a famed British Hussar regiment brought a specutacular account today of how an Italian column of 50 tanks was routed in a six-hour battle on November 19.

The official communique dismissed it with a few lines, but to these desert-wise men it was the most important encounter between British and Italian forces here since the Italians pushed their advance base to Sidi Barrani last September.

The "little party"—as they put it—took place at Hilquit, 15 miles south of Sidi Barrani in the 70-mile wide No Man's Land between the Italian and British lines.

The fight started at 8 a. m. when Italian planes dive-bombed and machinegunned one of the Hussar patrols in the area. As such attacks usually precede Fascist land movements, the British headquarters upon hearing about it by radio immediately sent out more patrols.

"We sighted an enemy column of 50 tanks and other vehicles," recounted a Hussar officer, who now rides to battle in tanks instead of on horseback.

"We gathered full forces into the region, the Italians opening fire when they saw our movements."
"Our colonel gave the order to attack. One squadron of our tanks darted around the enemy's left to cut off retreat, while the rest of our force closed in to within 200 yards of the Fascist vehicles.

Cargoes Explode.
"With heavy fire we disabled several of their tanks and sent two ammunition trucks sky-high when their cargoes exploded.

"Our tanks which had closed around their rear inflicted heavy damage on the Italian light tanks because they have less armor in the back.

"As the land battle raged, 17
Italian planes appeared overhead.
The RAF charged into the enemy formation, shooting down three of their planes at the first crack. The remainder took flight. One of our planes was lost; another was forced down, but the pilot was safe.

"As additional British tank patrols came into sight at 2 p. m. the Italian column beat a full retreat, abandoning three heavy trucks, five tanks and some guns which had been dismounted from trucks during the battle.

"The Hussars remained on the spot to blow up Mussolini's disabled tanks, while the Italians—from a great distance—took pot-shots at them.

"The Italians left nine dead in the desert. We took 10 prisoners and suffered only two casualties."
I visited the prisoners today in a camp behind the lines. Two of them complained bitterly that their commanding officer fled.

leaving them at the mercy of the British fire.
"A shell struck our truck, wounding the driver, who was carried back to the Italian lines," a prisoner told me. "We stayed, trying to make the truck run when another shell hit it and knocked it out for good.

"We had instructions to destroy a truck in such a case, so we threw hand grenades into it. But it didn't explode. Then there was machine-gun fire.

"We jumped under the truck and before we knew it it looked like all England was on us."

Britain Will Increase Milk Price Half Penny

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(P)—The food ministry announced today that beginning December 1 the price of milk would be increased a half penny a pint because of war-increased production costs.
This raises the cost to just over seven cents a pint.

Churchill Lauds Metaxas, Quotes Phrase in Greek

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(P)—Prime Minister Churchill congratulated Greek Premier Metaxas today on Greek victories against the Italians in Albania and concluded with the phrase "Zeet ee Ellas" (life to Greece).

"We are all inspired by the feat of Greek valor against an enemy so superior in numbers and equipment," said Churchill's message to Metaxas. "This recalls the classic age. Zeet ee Ellas."

China Expects Tokyo Puppet To Join Axis

Japan To Recognize Wang's Nanking Regime Next Week.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 24.—(P)—Informed quarters reported tonight that the Japanese-sponsored Nanking regime of Wang Ching-Wei might become a new adherent of the Axis, following formal recognition by Germany, Italy and Japan of Wang's government.

A Tokyo-Nanking treaty conveying Japan's formal recognition will be signed at Nanking, Wang's capital, November 30, according to a dispatch tonight by Wang's news agency.

High Japanese sources in Shanghai anticipated this announcement yesterday with disclosure that formal recognition of Wang's regime as the "national government of China" would come within 10 days.

Informed sources expressed the belief that, if Wang does line up with the Axis, it would have no more effect on China's resistance than did his order last March to cease resistance to Japan.

His government has failed to win any widespread public support or attract any important Chinese leaders. On the contrary, observers here say that while Wang has been talking peace China's military position has been improved considerably, particularly through the withdrawal of Japanese forces from Kwangsi and southwest Kwangtung provinces.

Vitamin B Is A Must For Your Daily Diet

By Ida Jean Kain

If you were a mouse instead of a man, science might have a cure for baldness waiting for you! Experiments by Dr. D. N. Wooley, of the hospital of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, seem to point to phytin, which is found in both liver and cereals, as the factor important to the staying power of the hair.

In research with mice which had lost their hair in patches, the use of a liver extract turned out to be the perfect restorative. Dr. Wooley then went on a chemical hunt to discover just what it was in the liver that proved so effective. It developed that phytin, the salt of inositol acid, was the anti-baldness factor.

Conservative as always, science emphasizes the fact that the restorative might not work out as well for men as it did for mice. But hair is hair! And some day there may be a cure or a preventive that will take the place of toupees. At any rate, it is significant that the answer is being sought in diet.

From your letters, it is evident that you are also keenly interested in the problem of grayness, and here again I regret to report that no definite dietary cure has been found. Extensive experiments point to the Vitamin B complex, however, as the dietary essential. The evidence indicates that some member of this group has a direct connection with pigmentation of the hair.

In these experiments also mice were the principals. The research was conducted at the University of California, and the substance in Vitamin B designated as the filtrate factor was separated from the other components of Vitamin B so that its effect alone might be studied. After 10 weeks on a diet lacking in the filtrate factor, the fur of the animals began to turn gray. When the factor was replaced in the diet, their fur began to darken. This substance is present in liver, brain, yeast, alfalfa and a number of vegetables.

These experiments are by no means conclusive. It does not follow that we have only to take phytin to grow hair on bald heads, or to include the filtrate factor in the diet to keep from turning gray.

If you say "Phooey! They don't know how to cure baldness or grayness!" you're right. They don't! But the results do establish the importance of numerous dietary factors—many of them still the subject of intensive research—to the general appearance. In the past few years, experiments have been consistently showing that the average diet is deficient in Vitamin B. Although Vitamin B is contained in many foods, it is lacking in such everyday staples as white flour, rice, macaroni, starches, sugars and fats. Also, with the exception of the glandular organs, heart muscle and pork, it is not present in large amounts in meats. The staples which do not furnish Vitamin B comprise a large part of our daily fare.

How can we make sure of getting more of this vitamin? By the use of whole-grain bread, or white bread which has been reinforced with Vitamin B. By the use of whole-grain cereals—those which contain all the wheat; and by not cooking the vegetables too long and not using soda in the water in which they are cooked, and by utilizing this vegetable water.

MY DAY: Spare the Wild Bird! Don't Wear Plumage

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, Friday.—Life in the country has been fairly uneventful. I had a few friends at lunch and dinner, a walk and a ride and time to sit and read by the fire. How delightful it all is, but just around the corner lies plenty of activity.

On Sunday I shall have to leave here to broadcast on the Chicago University Hour at 2:30 p. m. This discussion is being arranged so that the public may have a better understanding of the meaning of Art Week, which begins on Monday the 25th.

I must devote the rest of this column to telling you of some of the things which people have been writing me about of late. First and foremost, I have a really serious letter from the Audubon Society. More than 30 years ago, they led the fight to stop the slaughter of wild birds for their plumage. It appears, we ladies in those days used too many pretty feathers from wild birds on our hats and in other decorative way. Now the National Audubon Society has conducted an investigation and finds that they must start a new campaign. They ask the women of the United States to help them.

We ladies are guilty, of course. If we realized that we were stamping out so many beautiful wild birds and destroying the species for all time, we would not be very happy, no matter how becoming our headresses might be. But, most of us buy such things with little thought as to what lies behind the product.

There are always some feathers which are permissible to wear because they can be obtained without injuring the birds. If we dress these feathers up with very nice names, which modern advertising surely can, we will be just as happy wearing them as if they were some of those banned by the Audubon Society.

I hope, therefore, that the Audubon Society's crusade will be very successful, and that all of us who like to think we are well-dressed, will shun the use of feathers obtained by killing wild birds.

We should look askance at anyone who cannot say: "I bought this before 1940," and hope that if such a lady buys feathers of the banned variety we can at least say of her that fashions are against her.

I realize that the manufacturers of feathered goods will have to use their inventive genius to please the public in some other way, but they have done it before and they can do it again.

do they play?" Offer to reveal such fascinating tips about the future at your next party and just watch the gang flock round!

There's really no trick to it, either. You just deal the cards, then put two and two together to weave an exciting little story.

First on the scene is the Two of Diamonds—"A suitor your family doesn't approve of," you tell the fortune teller. "And here's the Seven of Hearts, an untrustworthy friend who'll secretly play siren in the affair. But this stormy episode will soon be forgotten! For here's a Five of Clubs saying you'll marry a man with pots of money."

"And what will my luck be?" You can answer that question, too. If the fortune-seeker draws the Nine of Hearts, he'll have riches, success. But let's hope he doesn't draw the Ten of Spades, an unlucky card speaking of gloom, trouble!

Of course, cards are just one of a dozen different ways you can tell clever fortunes. What cozier than a cup of tea with your beau after a drive—and what better way to prolong that intimate moment than a tea-leaf reading? Have him drink his cup nearly dry, then twirl it around three times, make a wish, and turn the cup upside down.

Now take the cup and look inside. If three leaves form a straight line his wish comes true. And do you see a group of leaves shaped like a ship? A trip, that means. An arrow? Good news.

Or read intriguing domino fortunes! Our 40-page booklet, "Let Me Tell Your Fortune," tells you how. Explains card reading by numerology, by the Rapselli and Seraphina systems—other fascinating ways. Gives a horoscope for each month, instructions for reading fortunes in tea leaves, dice, the "crystal."

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "LET ME TELL YOUR FORTUNE," to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Publicity Rumors Average One Marriage A Month For Cobina Wright Jr.

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 24.—"I wouldn't mind being married to men I know—and like," says pretty 18-year-old Cobina Wright Jr., social registerite, singer, and Hollywood's newest film actress. "But," she continues, "I'm furious every time I read that I'm on the verge of marrying someone I wouldn't be seen dead with."

Cobina is married off in the public prints on an average of once a month. "Two years ago," she tells me, "they gave me four husbands in one summer! Among them was Woolly Donahue. Cobina says she's known him since she was two, but had no intention then, or ever, of becoming Mrs. Donahue. And there was a handsome, wealthy, young Italian. "I was teaching him to speak English, but when the reporters discovered we were traveling to Europe on the same boat, they 'married' us."

"And then in Florence," Miss Wright continues. "There was only one man under 57. He was very good looking. After we'd been out a couple of times I discovered that he was the Crown Prince of Greece! The wire services went one better and had me down as the Queen of Greece!"

Hollywood scribes have been slightly more democratic. To date the beautiful blonde has been linked romantically with Franchot Tone, Robert Stack and Phil Kellog. "It was real enough with Bob," Cobina admits, "but I'd only had a couple of lunches and one dinner with Franchot, and while I've known Phil all my life and love him, he's the last person in the world I want to marry." The Stack-Wright romance was aflame early this year when Cobina sang nightly at the Beverly Wilshire hotel. Now that Bob is back in town it will possibly reignite.

Spencer Tracy, incidentally, is the dream-actor of Cobina's fan adoration. "I met him at Ciro's the other night," she says. "He's wonderful!" We both agree on this. "He's the only one I wanted to meet," concludes Cobina.

There is one other thing (apart from marrying her off) that makes Miss Wright angry. "When they describe me as a debutante," she says, "it's a lie. I'm not a debutante, I'm a girl about 18 years old, who has a coming-out party with the hopeful idea of getting to know members of the opposite sex."

"In the first place, I didn't have a coming-out party," says Miss Wright. "I didn't want one. And in the second place, it's very old-fashioned to believe that a girl of 18 today gives a party to meet men. She doesn't have to. She knows them for years before she is officially a debutante. I was there when Brenda (Frazier)—she's my next door neighbor—was married. She gave her party. When the list of men invited was submitted to her by the social secretary, she crossed out name after name. 'I don't know him,' she said. 'I don't know him.'"

The merry-go-round of the debutante, the coronation, luncheons, parties and charity balls, holds no allure for Miss Wright. "But you can't criticize them for doing it," she maintains. "They find it amusing, they just don't know how much more interesting it is to work."

Cobina has worked for her bread and butter since the age of 14 when she won a contest to sing at an exclusive Palm Beach hotel. (The family fortune crashed in 1929.) "I had my first screen test four years ago with mother (Cobina, senior, is a well-known singer). To look more grown-up I wore high heels. I was five feet, eight at the time and simply towered above mother. They didn't want to hire a giantess so they turned me down."

"A week ago I made another test, and here I am." Cobina's first movie is "Murder Among Friends." She is the "meanie" to Marjorie Weaver's nice girl. She has a one year contract with a $250 a week salary tag. And a burning ambition to break the hoodoo on society girls in pictures. Few make good.

Dr. Brady Writes About Legs

By Dr. William Brady.

Since the Doctor began Looking at Literature, if I recollect, 20 years ago, his propensity has been capitalized with more or less success in selling the works. But pray do not be uneasy. I am not going to publish a book about legs. Such a work, even though profusely illustrated, could not compete with the news pictures, society page and the ads.

Nevertheless, I intend to look at legs in this column from time to time. Some legs merit looking at; some want it; here we shall look at legs that need it.

Varicose legs; tobacco legs; piano legs; bandy legs; milk legs; diabetic legs; arteriosclerotic legs. I read these and any other legs the doctor should look at. I'll strive to think of other types of legs we had better consider while we're on the subject, namely, crinoid, squamous and goose-pimple or nutmeg-grater legs. Crinoid is medicalese for hairy; squamous for scaly; the medicalese for goose-pimple or nutmeg-grater is phrynodermia, meaning literally "toad skin." I mention the last three kinds of legs here not to air my knowledge of legs nor to embarrass those who have such legs, but only because I intend to suggest what I believe and hope may greatly improve or entirely correct the trouble in many such cases.

By the way, that's a feature of this column which some critics overlook. Unless I have something to suggest which may be of practical help, I prefer to sidestep the subject altogether. That is why a number of subjects of great importance to happiness and health are rarely or never discussed here—but nevertheless I want every reader to remember always that any problem submitted to me in a letter is as sacredly confidential as the most confidential correspondence between a patient in my consulting room, and I deem it a matter of conscience to give every such correspondent the information, instruction or advice I think he or she should have in the circumstances.

Constance Bennett, like all women who realize the necessity for well-kept hands, knows that pretty nails are only part of it. The cuticle must receive as much attention as the nail and polish. Miss Bennett is featured in Columbia's "Escape to Glory."

Wax Masque Beautifies Fingertips

By Winifred Ware.

Regardless of the care you take in keeping the nails clean and filed or the skill with which you apply your nail polish, there's often a jagged, rough or torn cuticle to annoy you, and even a beautiful nail polish will not hide bad cuticles. Apparently caring for the cuticle does not appeal to many women who "do their own nails," for that one phase of fingertip care seems neglected by most. And it's really important that you give more attention to that bit of skin which makes or mars the appearance of otherwise lovely fingernails.

If you have grown weary and careless about the usual treatment, a new method we have found may appeal to you. It's a fingertip wax or fingertip masque, created for brittle, broken nails and roughened cuticle. It's a pale green wax and is bought in a little round mould. To use it, merely heat the wax in a pan and when it's of a liquid consistency, dip the fingers into a point about one-half inch above the nail. Leave it on from 10 to 30 minutes and remember the warmer the masque the more effective is the treatment. To remove, gently slip it off the fingertips. Then you don't throw this used wax away, it is saved and reheated for the next treatment and the next. You can use it about 20 or 25 times.

This new and modern method of caring for the nails and cuticle can be used effectively every day, or at least daily until you see a marked improvement in the cuticle. It won't harm your polish and you'll find the nails will become firmer, have an added luster, and the cuticle will become soft and smooth.

For further information about this fingertip wax, call Winifred Ware at The Constitution, and if you don't live in Atlanta, write to her at this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Purely Personal Chatter About Atlanta Debutantes

(Editor's Note: This is the eleventh of a series of articles appearing every Monday and giving intimate glimpses concerning Atlanta debutantes. The Sally Forth articles will continue through the autumn and winter until the debutante season closes.)

By Sally Forth.

BARBARA INDELL, golden-haired debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Indell, combines "debuting" with the pursuit of knowledge in the field of art. This lovely girl spends her mornings sketching at the High Museum of Art, and Sally hears that she is quite a talented pupil. Her favorite sport is swimming.

Barbara received her education at Washington Seminary, where she was a member of the O. B. X. sorority, and later attended National Park Seminary in the national capital. There are no sororities at this popular school, but there are numerous clubs, and Barbara was an admired member of the Chi O Pi group.

Have you noticed this lovely girl's gracefully erect posture? Of course you have. You doubtless never guessed, however, that she and one of her classmates were judged to have the best carriage on the campus at National Park Seminary.

Barbara has enjoyed extensive European travel, having spent the summer of 1937 abroad. She visited many countries figuring prominently in the present war, including London, Berlin and southern Norway.

No sooner will the Atlanta debut season close than this attractive girl will be en route to Cleveland, Ohio, where she will be a sought-after dancing partner at the Assembly Ball in that city. One of the most brilliant affairs of the season the party is similar to the Halloween Ball here, and it is on this occasion that Cleveland debutantes are presented to society. Barbara will be escorted by John Walker, and Sally predicts that a grand and glorious time is in store for her.

Mr. and Mrs. Indell, you know, formally introduced their daughter to society at an elaborate tea-dance at which they were hosts at the Driving Club on November 15.

BARBARA INDELL.

P.-T. A. Council To Sponsor Play

Under the auspices of Decatur P.-T. A. Council the Clare Tree Major Children's Theater of New York will bring Maurice Maeterlinck's new comedy-fantasy, "Seven Wishes," or "Bread Is More Powerful Than Gold."

The play will be given on November 29 at 3 o'clock at Decatur Girls' High school.

Tickets are on sale at all the Decatur schools and the Decatur Flower Shop on Trinity place.

Mrs. W. L. Markert is committee chairman and states that the play reflects the conditions of the day, since Count Maeterlinck had to flee to the United States from the advance of the young dictator hordes. His Norman castle at Nice, built in the twelfth century, has been looted by the invading army. His chateau, on a hill outside of Paris, is occupied by the Germans.

The play is a fantasy, dealing with a cruel king ambitious to bring the world under his rule, and of his lovely little daughter who must suffer as long as he makes the world suffer. The King is defeated and the princess rescued by a brave young knight who marries the princess. The King repents after he is made to suffer the cold and hunger and misery he has brought on his own people as well as on those of the conquered nations. In Maeterlinck's play, the King's own people revolt when their sufferings become too intense to be placated by tales of further success of their armies.

Glory makes daily rounds of the studio, and when her money is gone, Helen suggests to Scottie Weston, her own agent, that he discourage Glory and send her home. Instead he gets her a job in Sunset studio's wardrobe department, but the first day a pin in a jacket sleeves scratches Mona Greer, and that temperamental star has her discharged. Scottie sends Glory to dramatic school and takes her to the important night spots, where she attracts much attention wearing gowns by William Van Lint, Sunser's chief designer. Mark Spencer, Scottie's handsome young lawyer, is with Glory constantly now. Allan Rhodes, popular movie lover, plays with Glory in her screen test and they fall in love. Glory, playing her second small part in a picture, is distracted when he disappears. Returning, he says he went to Mexico to tell Mona Greer, and she announces their engagement and forces Allan to marry her. Although co-starred with Allan, Glory spurns his attempts at reconciliation, realizing now she loves Mark. She finds Allan, who has been drinking heavily, shot to death on her dressing room floor. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT XXX. "They say she was seen with him this afternoon," Mark repeated. "The police have traced her to San Francisco. But she was not at the hotel where she had registered." "That looks funny," commented Helen. "I have a feeling," Scottie Weston said, "that when this case breaks it's going to involve a lot of people." Mark looked up quickly. "Meaning what?" "There's more to this than meets the eye," Scottie prophesied. Privately Glory agreed with him. Heaven only knew how many women had been involved with the "idol of the screen." Scottie's remark seemed to disturb Mark. "I think we'd better go," he said abruptly. "Glory is tired and ought to get to bed." "Right," Scottie agreed. After Mark and Scottie left, Helen and Glory lingered in front of the fire, busy with their own thoughts. Glory's mind still visualized Allan Rhodes lying dead at her feet. In her dressing room, "I'll never be able to forget it," she told Helen. "Of course you will," Helen comforted. "But if Honey had shot Allan, why would she do it in your dressing room, and then run off to San Francisco? That was the most incriminating thing she could do." "She must have done it," Glory said. "And if she didn't she's going to have a hard time proving that she is innocent." "She's too calculating and cold-blooded," Helen mused. "It isn't like Honey to shoot any one. I think she's too concerned with her own lovely neck to risk it killing any man." Glory considered. "You may be right. But if it wasn't Honey, who could it have been?" Helen shrugged. "Heaven only knows. It could have been some irate husband whose wife had fallen for Allan." "The police said there had been a struggle. The roses were overturned." Glory had expected it would be difficult to sleep that night, but sheer exhaustion dragged her overpowered nerves. She remembered nothing until it was morning and Helen was shaking her. "Wake up, Glory! Scottie wants to talk to you." "What time is it?" she inquired sleepily. "Almost noon." "Glory dragged herself to the telephone. Scottie's voice was brusque. "Be at my office by 2 o'clock. We've got some things to talk over, and by the way, look out for reporters. They've been hounding me all morning." His words brought Glory back to reality, to Allan's murder and all the terrible events of yesterday. "Helen, please go with me to Scottie's," she begged. "He says the reporters will be after me, and I can't face them alone." "I'll go," Helen promised. "Just leave them to me." Glory had not expected to avoid all publicity, but she was horrified to find her photograph spread all over the front page of the morning paper. "The idol of a million women was found shot in the dressing room of Glamor Girl Glory Stevens, movieland's newest star. Only a few months ago Glory Stevens and Allan Rhodes were sweethearts, until the 'idol' jilted her to marry an old flame, Mona Greer." The newspaper had reprinted an old picture of her with Allan. There was the whole story. No detail had escaped them. "A vase of overturned roses was found by the body. Flowers which had been sent to Miss Stevens by Rhodes, who apparently was trying to stage a 'comeback' in her affections." "How awful!" Glory cried. "Why do they have to do this to me?" "It's what the public likes," Helen said. "It's the kind of scandal the readers cry for." When they reached Scottie's office his secretary stared curiously at them. Glory suspected that from now on it would be like this. Proudly she lifted her head and went into Scottie's private office.

Mark was there, putting papers into his brief case. He looked as if he had not slept all night. Scottie Weston, however, was cheerful. "Look, Glory, we've got to give out some kind of statement. The papers have been pestering me all morning." "Why do I have to?" Glory said. "Because the public has a right to know what goes on. If you don't say something, they'll think you're concealing things. This is your chance to tell your side of it. How you were flattered by his sophistication and charm, but how you were never anything but friends." "Oh, Scottie, no!" Glory protested. "They already know I was engaged to him." "Don't admit it," Scottie barked. "Never mind, I'll write it. All you'll have to do is sign your name." Before Glory had a chance to object further the office door opened and Honey Newton stepped in. "Mark!" she cried breathlessly, "you've got to help me! The police are following me." Scarcely had the words left her mouth than an officer appeared in the doorway behind her. "Sorry, Miss Newton. This game is up! I'm taking you to headquarters." "No!" screamed the blonde. "I didn't do it, I tell you!" The officer closed the door. "All right," he said, "let's hear your alibi!" The room was tense with drama as all eyes were turned upon Honey Newton. Honey gave the address. "And what do you do for a living?" "I'm a manicurist," the blonde informed him. "Then how can you afford to live in a place like that?" "That's none of your business!" "Oh, yes it is, in this case. Wasn't Allan Rhodes the man who paid the rent? And when he tried to walk out on you, you shot him?" "It's not true! Allan never gave me a penny!" "But you knew him?" "Yes, and I saw him yesterday afternoon." "Where were you at the time of the murder?" "In my apartment." "Alone?" "My friend came about seven; I was packing to go to San Francisco." "Why were you going to San Francisco?" "For a little vacation." "Was your friend going with you?" "Yes, but he couldn't make it. He stopped by to tell me I'd have to go alone." "Isn't it true that you could have shot Rhodes at the studio and still have been back at your apartment by 7 o'clock?" "Certainly not! It takes longer than that to get from the studio to my apartment." The detectives looked at the others. "How about that?" "It's true," Glory answered. "It takes a good hour, driving as fast as possible. I know because I live only a few blocks from here." He turned back to Honey. "Then this 'friend' was with you at 7 o'clock in your apartment?" "Yes!" "And Allan Rhodes was not the friend of whom you speak?" "No. He was not." Continued Tomorrow.

Poll Reveals U. S. Favors More Planes for England

Gallup Survey Shows 60 Per Cent of Voters Want Help Sent Even If America's Defense Program Is Delayed.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.
Copyright, 1940.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 24.—With American aviation plants working to achieve the greatest airplane production in history, one major question popular opinion may have some influence in deciding is: Should we send more to the British?

Regardless of how this question may develop in the months ahead, a nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows today that a substantial majority of United States voters favor sending more planes to England, "even though this might delay our own national defense program."

"England is the battlefield," Institute interviewers were repeatedly told by voters throughout the nation. "Now is the critical time. If England wins, we may never have to use our own planes."

Although the question of how many planes can be spared is one for the military and defense experts, 60 per cent of those voters with opinions on the question said they would favor sending more planes to Britain.

Voters were asked: "Should the United States send more airplanes to England, even though this might delay our own national defense program?" The answer of those with opinions were:

Yes	60%
No	40%

One voter in ten (10%) said he was undecided on the question. President Roosevelt raised the issue of more planes for Britain in his Boston speech shortly before the election. He announced the administration was clearing the way for the British purchase of some 20,000 fighting planes of all types in coming months.

The survey shows that Democrats and Republicans are on the same side where planes for Britain are concerned. Sixty-one per cent of the Democrats with opinions on the question said they would approve sending more planes, while 59 per cent of the Republicans agreed.

Closest division of sentiment on the question appeared in states like Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, where an average of 54 per cent of the voters in the survey said they would favor sending more planes. Forty-six per cent were opposed if this should mean curtailing American defense production.

Section by section the results were:

	Send More	Opposed
New England, Mid-Atlantic	60%	40%
East Central	54	46
West Central	56	44
South	72	28
West	64	36

chorus with practically every piece the band plays, and novelties are featured.

With 12 instruments and a girl singer who attracts the immediate eye with her flippant upswing hair-do, Peters' aggregation presents an "easy-on-the-ears" rhythm with no definite style other than "music."

Peters himself sings many of the numbers, especially the ballads which are presented in a tempo crossing between fox-trot and light swing. The girl singer is Dottie Lee. Other vocalists are Cliff Jackson, the guitar player; George Owen, trumpet, and Frank Bettin-court, trombone.

Peters, a coming band which has been playing in Texas and the Midwest, is the first band booked into the Rainbow Roof under the no-cover charge policy.—LEE ROGERS.

AFL Strife At Convention Believed Over

'Compromise' Anti-Racketeering Measure Wins Approval.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 24.—(AP) The American Federation of Labor, its pulse returned to normal after committee approval of a "compromise" anti-racketeering measure, resumes convention sessions tomorrow with fresh hope it will not be further disturbed by internal explosions.

Nothing on the convention calendar portended such tempestuous scenes as David Dubinsky's proposal to stamp out union gangsterism.

An important AFL official said the resolutions committee had unanimously approved a "changed" form of the proposal made by Dubinsky, who declared he was thrice attacked by a labor leader because of the measure.

Throngs See New Electric Fountain Here

Streets Adjoining Joel Hurt Park Jammed With Traffic.

The city's new electric fountain in Joel Hurt Park late yesterday afternoon attracted thousands of Atlantans to the streets adjoining the new downtown park, creating a traffic tangle that took 14 policemen to handle.

Cars were jammed up for five blocks on Ivy street, four blocks on Edgewood and three blocks on Gilmer street, police reported. The crowd began to grow heavy at early dusk and traffic remained tangled until after 6 o'clock. George I. Simons, parks general manager, reiterated last night that water used in the fountain was reused and that there was no waste of city water.

After dinner traffic was again jammed around the site as theater-goers stopped for a view.
